The Town Fathers met in regular monthly session on Tuesday evening of last week, all councilmen present. President Trostle called meeting to order. Minutes of previous meetings were read and approved.

The committee on proposed alleys in east-end of town reported no meeting yet and committee was continued on motion.

Committee on advisability of more uniform curb lines and streets recommended that an ordinance be adopted providing for the laying of a uniform curb by the borough, expense of same to be paid by the borough and each property holder to pay pro rata share thereof. Said curb to be constructed of concrete on top and faced dresser granite, that on all streets 69 feet wide the sidewalks be 12 feet wide and on streets 50 feet wide sidewalks be 10 feet wide, thus establishing a uniform grade by the curb line. On motion the Ordinance Committee was instructed to draw up an ordinance in conformity with the recommendations.

Councilmen Butt called attention to trouble on West Middle street and exhibited a drawing showing the changes asked for by Calvin Gilbert. Report of surveyor accompanied the drawing. Motion prevailed that a committee of three be appointed to look into matter and Councilmen Codori, Stock and Shearer were named as the committee.

The greater part of meeting was devoted to the discussion of this West Middle street trouble. Mr. Gilbert asked that this street be made in line with the built up portion of the street. The surveys show that at a point a short distance west of West street the street has gone off toward the north, so that the lots on the north side of street in place of being 180 feet in depth are two or three feet less than this. On the other hand the survey showed that if the street was made straight the building line would run into the three houses west of railroad. The committee are to investigate into all the facts and conditions and report to the Council.

The secretary was instructed to notify the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad to fill the hole at their tracks south side of West Middle street and to plank tracks on said street.

Borough Attorney reported that the bond of the Lighting Company was for the fulfillment of contract under the ordinance and gave the opinion that if Lighting Company deviated from contract, then the bond is responsible for it.

A motion carried to pay $3385 of notes of the borough held by the 1st National Bank of Gettysburg.

Home Destroyed by Fire

Fire on Monday afternoon completely destroyed the two story dwelling house of Mrs. Charles Yeatts at Gardner's Station together with a large portion of the contents. Sparks from the engine of a passenger train are supposed to have caused the blaze, being discovered shortly after the train passed.

The fire was first seen by Isaiah Bream and W. A. Dickson, carpenters who were working near the Yeatts property. When it was discovered the flames had gained great headway and were rapidly consuming the shingle roof. The men rushed to the house and told Mrs. Yeatts that the building was on fire. Efforts were at once made to get out the furniture and practically all of that on the first floor was saved though much of the second story goods burned.

A number of beds were burned with bed clothes, wearing apparel and other articles. In the cellar were several hundred jars of fruit, potatoes, meat and other supplies, all of which were destroyed. Mrs. Zinn, of Carlisle, who was visiting Mrs. Yeatts, lost a sum of money, a pension check and some clothes in the fire.

The house was a two story frame structure and burned very rapidly so that it was seen that it could not be saved and all efforts were directed to getting out the contents.

Mrs. Yeatts had $750 insurance on the building and furniture in the Mechanicsburg and Cumberland County Mutual.

Three Stores Robbed

On Thursday night of last week three stores of the town were broken into by burglars and an attempt made on a fourth store. The double doors of store of Edward H. Culp, corner of York and East Liberty street were pried open and several dollars were secured. The butcher shop of Reible and Crouse was entered and twenty cents taken out of the money drawer and the grocery store of Zinn Bros., Carlisle street was entered and a small quantity of canned goods and twenty-nine cents obtained. At the Wine-man grocery store an unsuccessful attempt was made to get into the building, a glass in a rear window being broken. There are no clues to the perpetrators. Last Friday, because a young man had a cut finger the conclusion was jumped that it might have been cut on the broken window pane, and on Saturday morning, at a hearing before Justice Hill, James Pittenturf satisfactorily explained how he received cut while working at the Gettysburg Roller Mills from a shovel in the hands of another employee, two witnesses detailing how cut was received. The boy's mother said he was at home on the night of the burglaries and there being no evidence against Pittenturf he was discharged by the Justice.

THE FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY

COMMISSION ON PLANS TO MEET THIS WEEK.

Tentative Suggestions as to Character of the Celebration Will be Considered.

This week, October 12, 13 and 14, a meeting of national importance to take preliminary steps for the interstate and national celebration of the 50th anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg, on July 1, 2 and 3, 1913, will be held in Harrisburg and Gettysburg. At least thirty states and territories, including Porto Rico, will be represented at the preliminary meeting, while members of a committee of the United States senate and house appointed to co-operate with Pennsylvania, will also attend.

The commissioners who will attend the conference have been appointed by the governors or other proper authorities. They will be the guests during this meeting of the state, represented by Governor Edwin S. Stuart, and the 50th anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg commission.

It is planned by the Pennsylvania commission to arrange a celebration of the historic battle that will eclipse anything Pennsylvania has seen since the centennial celebration in Philadelphia in 1876.

No details have yet been announced and, indeed, little has been done except to make tentative suggestions. A working plan will be adopted at the forthcoming meeting after the commissioners from congress and the other states have had opportunity to view the battlefield in a body and to express their opinions as to a proper program.

The Pennsylvania and other commissioners will meet in Harrisburg at the Hotel Columbus on the evening of October 12. The next morning the conference will be formally received by Governor Edwin S. Stuart at the executive department and then the Pennsylvania commission will be the host at a luncheon at the Harrisburg Club.

Following the luncheon the party will be conveyed to Gettysburg and taken over the first day's fight and in the evening a formal welcome will be extended them in the court house, by President Singmaster of the Seminary.

The party will remain at Gettysburg over night, and on October 14 will organize formally and be taken over the second and third day's fight. Next will come the outline of tentative plans, with arrangements for future meetings at stated intervals. It has been suggested that the program include plans whereby the north and south will assume prominent parts together, and the United States government also be given a prominent place. Although Pennsylvania will be the host of the nation at the time of the semicentennial celebration, this state's part in the exercises will naturally be prominent because of the part played by Pennsylvania soldiers 47 years ago, and because the battlefield is located in the Keystone state.

The celebration had its inception in an act approved on May 13, of last year, that provided for the appointment of a commission to "arrange for a proper and fitting recognition and observance at Gettysburg of the 50th anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg; with authority to invite the co-operation of the congress of the United States, and of other states and commonwealths." A report is to be made to the next legislature, with recommendations of legislation.

The commissioners appointed by Governor Stuart, all of whom are veterans of the Civil War, are General Louis Wagner, brevet brigadier general, U. S. Volunteers, of Philadelphia, chairman; Captain J. Richards Boyle, U. S. Volunteers, of Philadelphia, secretary; William D. Dixon, brevet brigadier general, U. S. Volunteers; R. Dale Benson, brevet major, U. S. Volunteers; R. Bruce Ricketts, brevet colonel, First Pennsylvania Artillery; William Penn Lloyd, adjutant, First Pennsylvania Cavalry; Alexander McDowell, sergeant and brevet major, One Hundred and Twenty-first Pennsylvania Infantry; Irwin K. Campbell, corporal, Ninth Pennsylvania Reserves; Lewis T. Brown, private, One Hundred and Second Pennsylvania Volunteers.

The congressional committee consists of Senators George T. Oliver, of Pennsylvania, chairman; W. B. Heyburn, of Idaho, and Isidor Rayner, of Maryland; Congressmen James A. Tawney, of Minnesota; Daniel F. Lafean, of Pennsylvania, and John Lamb, of Virginia.

Only four states and two territories have failed to accept the invitation of the commission to join with Pennsylvania in celebrating the battle, and these may later appoint representatives. Nevada, Ohio, Oregon and Hawaii have accepted the invitation but representatives have not yet been named. The representative named from Alabama has died.

The following are the representatives named from states and territories:

Gen. J. F. Smith, from Arkansas; Hon. E. L. Hawk, from California; Hon. Thos. D. Bradstreet, from Connecticut; Andrew Woodside, from Colorado; Gen. E. M. Law, from Florida; Gen. Clement A. Evans, from Georgia; Gen. George H. Roberts, from Idaho; J. B. Greenhut, from Illinois; Dr. Nathaniel B. Cox, from Indiana; B. C. Ward, from Iowa; E. T. Ware, Esq., from Kansas; Col. Andrew Cowler, from Kentucky; Gen. Joseph L. Chamberlain, from Maine; Gen. John R. King, from Maryland; Col. Thos. L. Livermore, from Massachusetts; John Allen Bigelow, from Michigan; Gen. Lewis A. Grant, from Minnesota; Col. W. A. Montgomery, from Mississippi; A. G. Peterson, from Missouri; Hon. Henry N. Blake, from Montana; Gen. Chas. F. Mander-on, from Nebraska; Gen. John N. Patterson, from New Hampshire; Gen. E. Burd Grubb, from New Jersey; Major Gen. Daniel E. Sickles, from New York; Jno. C. Scarborough, from North Carolina; J. L. Richmond, from North Dakota; Hon. Wm. Higgins, from Oklahoma; Gen. Elisha H. Rhodes, from Rhode Island; Gen. James W. Moore, from South Carolina; N. H. Kinkman, from South Dakota; Hon. Luke E. Wright, from Tennessee; Hon. L. H. Smyth, from Utah; Col. Herman W. Allen, from Vermont; Dr. Rawley W. Martin, from Virginia; W. H. Wiscombe, from Washington; Gen. Romeo H. Freer, from West Virginia; Gen. Fred. C. Winkler, from Wisconsin; Gen. Prince A. Gatchell, from Wyoming; Col. Thos. S. Hopkins, from District of Columbia; Gen. Wm. L. Dison, from Alaska; Wm. G. Hartraft, from Arizona; Hon. Jefferson Reynolds, from New Mexico, and Dr. Martin G. Brumbaugh, from Porto Rico.

The local committee, of which Dr. Singmaster is chairman, met on Monday night and discussed the arrangements for Thursday evening. The Citizens' Band will escort the visitors to Court House, and our people are urged to turn out to welcome the visitors who have the arranging of the biggest event Gettysburg will have since the battle was fought.

Claim vs. Alleman Hardware Co.

Referee in bankruptcy, J. E. Vanderveet, Esq., of York, has been notified of an important decision handed down by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in the case of H. N. Gitt vs. W. T. Ziegler et al., trustees of the L. M. Alleman Hardware company, of Gettysburg, a bankrupt. In the distribution of the balance on the account of the trustees of the bankrupt estate of the Alleman Hardware Company, Mr. Gitt presented as claims against the estate a number of notes of the company held by him amounting in the aggregate to $21,094, and asked that he be allowed a dividend on the same.

A number of creditors filed objection to the allowance of said claim. Referee Vanderveet sustained the objections and refused to allow the claim to be approved. An appeal was then taken to the United States District court for the middle district of Pennsylvania, which court in an opinion by Judge Archibald sustained the referee and refused the allowance of Mr. Gitt's claim.

Mr. Gitt then appealed from the latter decision to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. This appeal was argued at Philadelphia last March, held under advisement until a few days ago, when an opinion was handed down in which the decisions of Judge Archibald and that of the referee were reversed and the claim of Mr. Gitt was ordered to be allowed.

W. C. Sheely and J. D. Keith, Esqs., of the Adams county bar, represented the objecting creditors and the trustees, and Allen C. Wiest, J. W. Gitt and C. J. Delone, Esqs., appeared for Mr. Gitt.

The Impostor, by John Reed Scott.

The new novel "The Impostor" by John Reed Scott of this place has the distinction of being the first to be written almost entirely in Gettysburg. The labor of gathering the material was done in Annapolis and is located in and around that city but the great part of work of writing was done here. No part of his previous four successful novels were written in this place.

"The Impostor" does not lack a single quality which distinguished his former books and made of them the best sellers in the years of their issue. It has the same happy movement from beginning to end so that there isn't a dull page. When within a dozen pages of the end it seems that the swing of the story must carry the reader at least a hundred pages more before it could be satisfactorily ended, but things move rapidly and before you know it you have the whole story and are satisfied and realize that you have enjoyed and relished it. The story is largely carried forward in conversations, one of Mr. Scott's happy gifts, which distinguishes all his novels and the conversational parts of "The Impostor" are bright and sparkling, never tedious.

This fifth book of Mr. Scott's has something about it distinguishing it from the others which we might name as more worth while. It gives a vivid picture of Colonial days in Old Annapolis and the country round about. It shows us Maryland in its making and the types that went into the making and this picture is charming.

One of the best characters Mr. Scott has ever drawn is old Henry Marbury, the redemptorist. He sold his services for five years to pay his passage across the sea and because of the fact that he had been owned he lost caste in the new community. Marbury prospered and with his money wins a way for his children into the upper strata of society of Annapolis but he never loses the traits that made him, the homely honesty, and his modesty and wonderful common sense. Every glimpse of the old man is refreshing and many sparks of a naive wisdom fall from his lips.

But all this has nothing to do with the story, but we are not going to tell it. The English outcast who is shipwrecked and appropriates the letters of introduction of one who lost his life in the same shipwreck furnished the opportunity to play the impostor and his fortunes are followed to the end through official and social life of the new country, among the old plantation families in and about Annapolis. And say the story of the pirates is one that belongs to the age and most thrilling use is made of Long Sword and his crew.

We congratulate Mr. Scott on his book and expect to hear that it will run into more editions than any of his previous works. It is published by the J. B. Lippincott Co. of Philadelphia and is illustrated in color by Underwood.

The First Ball Game.

"Come on, Mayme! let's go to the game. We don't want to miss it, 't would sure be a shame." "Oh, Don't ask me Jimmie, you know it can't be, for we're just cleaning house and the work's up to me. Here's windows to clean and these floors to be scrubbed, and all these old doors to be polished and rubbed; you see, dear boy, I have got plenty to do, without thinking of going to this ball game with you." "Ah, cut it," said Jimmie. "Let me put you wise. Just buy some Chi-Namel, that 'stiff' is the prize. They say it makes any old woodwork like new. If you'll go to the game I'll just buy some for you." It does not make your wrist tired to apply Chi-Namel varnish—once on it wears for years—requires no special care—all colors in small or large cans at our store. Sold by J. H. Colbourn.

Silence!

The instinct of modesty natural to every woman is often a great hindrance to the cure of womanly diseases. Women shrink from the personal questions of the local physician which seem indelicate. The thought of examination is abhorrent to them, and so they endure in silence a condition of disease which surely progresses from bad to worse.

It has been Dr. Pierce's privilege to cure a great many women who have found a refuge for modesty in his offer of FREE consultation by letter. All correspondence is held as sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription restores and regulates the womanly functions, abolishes pain and builds up and puts the finishing touch of health on every weak woman who gives it a fair trial.

Trifling Telephone Tangles

By Clara H. Holmes

Kittie Smith and John Colson were lovers, but perversity in matters matrimonial have become a proverb, and their case was no exception to the rule.

Kittie lived with a married sister, and as frequently happened, she assumed more authority than the most exacting parent would have done. She most decidedly refused consent to their marriage. "That child," she exclaimed indignantly, and promptly forbade John the house.

But, love finds a way, and their trysting place was in the thick shrubbery at the lower end of the garden. John was trying to persuade her to a clandestine marriage, but she lacked courage to assent. Her sister's shrill call from the back porch decided the question.

"Kittie, Kittie Smith! Come here this instant and put little Billy to bed."

"As if you were her servant!" whispered John indignantly. "That settles it, you are going to marry me to-morrow night."

"Oh, John, she'll never let me," breathlessly.

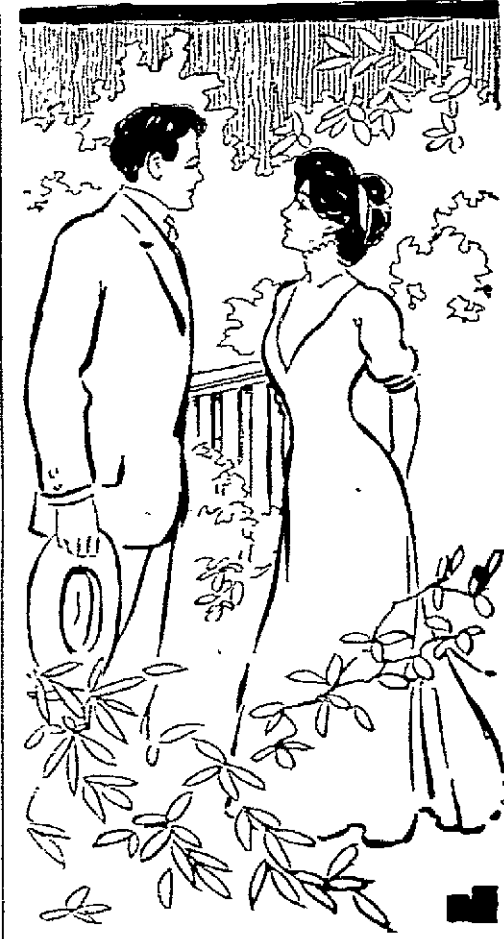

"She won't? Then we'll not ask her. You put those kids to bed as soon as the chickens go to roost, so you can get to the telephone office by ten o'clock. I'll put in the call with the operator and she'll give you the line so I can tell you where to meet me. Ten o'clock, sharp! I'll be waiting and so will the parson."

"Sister's coming," whispered Kittie, tremblingly.

"Let her come; she'll not find me," replied John airily, and leaping the fence, was gone.

Kittie met her sister with demure unconsciousness. "Were you calling?" she asked.

Kittie presented herself promptly on time at the telephone office and

"You Are Going to Marry Me Tomorrow Night."

giving her name, asked: "Is there a call for me?"

"Yes, Miss Olson," was the reply, at the same time indicating her box.

Kittie smiled consciously. "Colson! Well, now, or an hour from now will make no great difference," she thought.

"Hello, John," she called softly as soon as she had closed the door.

"Hello, Het," came the instant reply. "It's all right, come to the corner of Belmont and Main. I have an auto waiting, so hurry up."

"All right," she replied, and hung up the receiver. "Wasn't it funny that he called me Pet? I've heard him say a hundred times that he detested it—but I don't! I think it's just sweet. I suppose it's just the 'phone, but his voice didn't sound a bit natural," she murmured as she wrapped her veil about her head, completely concealing her features.

John, at the appointed place, lifted her to the seat without speaking. As he backed, preparatory to turning, another auto came swiftly down the street, and on the corner swerved toward them.

"Oh, no, you don't, Dave Olsen!" exclaimed John, speeding away.

"Hi, there! Stop, you idiot, or I'll have you arrested," yelled the driver of the other car.

"Come on, then," shouted John desisively. To Kittie he said: "Hold fast, I'm going to let her go."

But go as he would his pursuer kept pace with him, so he began twisting and turning, round one corner swerving ominously, skidding on another sharp turn until Kittie shrieked in affright.

Escape seemed impossible, so he doubled back through dark and narrow streets, the lamps on the pursuing machine gleaming like menacing eyes almost within touch. On a lighted corner a policeman ordered him to halt, and as he failed to obey, fired a shot at him. Kittie screamed and half rose, as if to leap from the car.

"Sit down!" called John angrily. At sound of a second shot she began to sob aloud.

"Oh, shucks," muttered John in vexation. A moment later he remarked, repentantly: "Why, Het, we don't get married every day in the year, but we are going to be married tonight if we have to smash the automobile record. I do believe that fellow's lost himself, or else the cop's got him." He began to slow down.

Kittie inarticulately murmured something about smashing the automobile instead of the record, to which John paid no attention.

As he lifted her down at the parsonage he whispered to her: "I never thought you'd show the white feather." With a laugh, he half pushed her up the steps to where the parson was waiting for them.

Kittie, essaying to untie her veil with trembling fingers, glanced toward John, who stood, hat in hand, speaking to the clergyman. She made a rush and took refuge behind his reverence.

"I don't want to marry this man, I don't even know him, and—and—he's a maniac," she cried hysterically.

John turned to look at her. "Well, I would be crazy to marry you. Thunder, they'd have me up for baby stealing. Who are you, anyway?"

"I'm Kittie Smith," sobbingly, "but I don't know who you are."

"Well, I'm John Smith. My tribe is numerous, but it doesn't include grown-up babies," sarcastically.

The parson stood rubbing his hands together helplessly. "Well, I do declare! My dear, were you expecting to be married?" he asked of Kittie.

"Yes, sir, I was, to John Colson. I don't know this rough man at all," beginning to weep again.

John fidgeted restlessly. "Miss Smith, can't you shut down the flood gate long enough for explanations? As I understand it, you planned to elope with John Colson. And I, John Smith, had a similar arrangement with Hetty Olsen. Now, where were you to meet John Colson?"

"He left a call for me at the public telephone office, and when I talked with him—"

"But you didn't talk to him. That bungling operator gave you to me, and must have given him my party, Hetty Olsen. Fine mix-up! I thought that fellow following us was Het's wrathful sire, but it must have been your John. Now, we'll find them in one of three places, at the police station, for speeding; at the hospital, because he got in the way of the policeman's bullet; or back at the telephone office waiting for us."

At mention of the first two places Kittie gave another little shriek.

"Oh, stop pulling the whistle. I'll have Het give you a few lessons. You wouldn't catch her doing the weeping act or squealing over anything. She's clear grit, Het is," he concluded with evident pride.

The same officer who hailed John Smith either took better aim or had a lucky accident in the case of John Colson. When his second command to halt seemed likely to be disregarded, as was his first, his bullet just grazed John's elbow, benumbing his arm so that his hand dropped from the steering wheel. Hetty pushed him aside, taking his place before the car had time to swerve.

"Is it broken?" she asked sympathetically.

"I don't know, but that doesn't matter; what does really matter is, they have got away from us," ruefully.

"They'll be hunting us when John finds out that he has the wrong girl," said Hetty laughing confidently.

As they came to a stop the policeman came up swinging his club impressively. "And what do you mean, racin' like that?" he demanded.

John laughed infectiously. "I'll tell you, I was trying to catch a thief."

That fellow ahead was running off with my best girl. Wouldn't you chase him?"

"Faith I think I would, then! Well?" beginning to smile.

"It's this way. The old folks object, and—you know how 'tis. Through mistake he got my girl and I have his." The laughing tone, aided by a little persuader slipped into the brawny hand resting on the car, proved potent.

"Well, g'wan wid re, but don't ye dare let me catch ye racin' again."

"I'll not let you catch me if I can help it," answered John facetiously.

"I think we better return to the telephone office," said Hetty, turning to the car, but as they approached the building they saw that the office was closed for the night.

"What now?" asked John in a troubled tone.

"I'm sure I don't know," replied Hetty with a laugh. "It wouldn't matter so much to us, only I'm certain father would never let me mix his toddy again. It's once—perhaps, twice—Never! with him."

"And Kittie! Oh, she'll never let me mention elope again," said John.

"Hello, what's this?" as a car came rushing toward them.

"That you, John Colson?" came the greeting.

"It certainly is," replied he.

There ensued a rapid fire of questions and answers, an equally rapid exchange of partners, a little weeping on Kittie's part over her John's arm, a speedy ride to the waiting clergyman, and in a very short time two happy couples came out again into the night, each man wearing an air of proud proprietorship.

The parson remained standing in the open doorway enjoying the happy termination of the affair, also smiling a little at thought of the two generous gold pieces clasped in his hand. "We've given you lots of annoyance, parson, take these as a recompense," the two Johns had said.

Simultaneously with the report that the Canadian mail was robbed came the story of a New York male robbed by his wife.

THE OCTOBER MAGAZINES

WITH A GREAT NEW POEM BY KIPLING.

Things of Vital Importance in the Care of the Orchard—Marriages of Another Age.

A Wonderful Poem by Kipling.

The October "American Magazine" contains the following wonderful new poem entitled "If—" by Rudyard Kipling.

"If you can keep your head when all about you

Are losing theirs and blaming it on you:

If you can trust yourself when all men doubt you,

But make allowance for their doubting too;

If you can wait and not be tired by waiting,

Or being lied about don't deal in lies,

Or being hated don't give away to hating,

And yet don't look too good, nor talk too wise:

"If you can dream—and not make dreams your master:

If you can think—and not make thoughts your aim;

If you can meet with Triumph and Disaster

And treat those two impostors just the same.

If you can bear to hear the truth you've spoken

Twisted by knaves to make a trap for fools.

Or watch the things you gave your life to, broken,

And stoop and build 'em up with worn-out tools:

"If you can make one heap of all your winnings

And risk it on one turn of pitch-and-toss,

And lose, and start again at your beginnings

And never breathe a word about your loss:

If you can force your heart and nerve and sinew

To serve your turn long after they are gone,

And so hold on when there is nothing in you

Except the Will which says to them: 'Hold on!'

"If you can talk with crowds and keep your virtue,

Or walk with Kings—nor lose the common touch,

If neither foes nor loving friends can hurt you,

If all men count with you, but none too much;

If you can fill the unforgiving minute

With sixty seconds' worth of distance run,

Yours is the Earth and everything that's in it,

And—which is more—you'll be a Man, my son!"

The Care of the Orchard.

"Three things are of vital importance in arranging your orchards," says E. P. Powell, in the October "Outing."

"Outing." "The first is good drainage. In most of our clay soils I would use up the stones by creating ditches every fifty feet."

"The second point to consider is that there is no better way of killing fruit trees than to put barnyard manure around the roots. You may top dress with some of this material, but beware about using it in the hole that you have dug."

"The third point in planting is to mulch your trees, every one of them, just as soon as planted. This mulch may be made of any porous stuff that you happen to have about, coal ashes or tan bark or weeds or autumn leaves—anything but material that mice will be likely to bed in. Coal ashes, on the whole, are the best material that we have handy."

A Matrimonial Pilgrimage.

The sister of Simon Newcomb, the great astronomer, tells in the October "McClure's" of their father's John Newcomb's wanderings in search of a wife, whom he had decided to select in accordance with scientific theories.

"John Newcomb stopped at a farmhouse for his refreshments, and in each house, if there was a daughter of marriageable age, he tarried perhaps a day, or even longer, to make a study of the maiden. He always made himself 'handy' about the place, drawing up water with the great well-sweep, bringing in fire-wood—doing anything that he could do and still keep near the daughter."

"Disappointment met him at every door. At one house the cooking was poor; at another the house was not neatly kept; at a third there was scolding or fault-finding, a want of harmony—and in all the maidens a lack of desire for learning or education. One young lady little knew by what a narrow margin she missed her fate. All was going smoothly till, when she was molding the dough for the baking-pan, he noticed that a considerable portion of the dough was left in the wooden kneading trough. He asked her the reason for this, and her reply was that she left it for the horse, because he was fond of it. She always did this, she said; there was plenty. "Want of thrift," decided the young man, and he shouldered his bundle and walked on."

dom, run your finger down the column and pick any class. The class of 1871!

It had eleven graduates. One of them remained a bachelor. Don't be too severe on him. He died at twenty-four. Of the remaining ten, four were married twice and two were married three times. For ten husbands, therefore, there were eighteen wives.

Mr. G. Stanley Hall, President of Clark University, very competently remarks: "The problem of superfluous women did not exist in those days. They were all needed to bring up another woman's children."

"The ten husbands of the Harvard class of 1871, with their eighteen wives, had seventy-one children. They did replenish the earth. They also filled the churchyards."

Twenty-one of those seventy-one children died in childhood.

This left fifty to grow up. It was an average of five surviving children for each of the ten fathers. But it was an average of only 2.7 for each of the eighteen mothers.—William Hard in the October "Everybody's."

Colonial Houses.

Aymar Embury in his article in October "House Beautiful" on "The Colonial House" draws attention to the present day tendency which seems to be set pretty strongly toward houses which embody the principles of colonial design. The eyesores that passed for architecture during the period from 1880 to 1890 are many of them still present, and the artistic starvation of the people, not only of the United States but of the world during all that time was ineradicably deep. So strong, however, was the impulse of colonial days that when at last we began to recover from the obsession of Strawberry Hill Gothic and new Queen Anne cottages, our designs turned at once to the old American farms and again began to design in the rational, simple, picturesque and home-like colonial style. This article as well as the whole magazine is beautifully illustrated with homes and home things.

Regulating Corporations.

The good accomplished by the new York law for the regulation of the capitalization of corporations is thus illustrated by John S. Kennedy, in "The World To-Day" for October;

A traction company asked permission to issue $1,000,000 in bonds to construct its line. It was found that the company had outstanding an equal amount of stock, with no tangible property in existence; that there had been paid but $5000 in actual cash, and the balance was issued to the company's president as compensation for securing a franchise. Before granting permission for the bonds, the commission ordered $945,000 stock to be surrendered and cancelled, and the road was saved from that flood of water, and is now in complete operation.

Tuberculosis Germs.

"If a person who has tuberculosis drinks out of a cup and then another person should drink out of the same cup before the cup has been washed, the germ may be transmitted in this way," says James Jenkins, Jr., in "Woman's Home Companion" for October. "Boiling water kills germs as effectively as any antiseptic, and dishes should never be considered absolutely clean that have not been washed in this way. Two persons should never use the same towel. The plan of individual washstands, which is so commonly used on the continent of Europe, should be more generally adopted in America."

"If you have a telephone in your house, the mouthpiece of the telephone should be cleaned every day, just as we clean the dishes we use on the table, and should be thoroughly disinfected at least twice a week."

The Remedy for Diphtheria.

Thomas Lothrop Stedman in treating of the "Practical Victories of Medical Science" in the October "Good Housekeeping" says: Emil Von Behring, a German physician, is the man to whom so many thousands of mothers owe the recovery of their children from the once so dreaded diphtheria. The discovery of diphtheria antitoxin was announced in 1893 and was at first received with much skepticism, but a trial soon convinced all but the most conservative (or obstinate) physicians that this was really nature's remedy and therefore to be accepted. It cures in such an enormous proportion of cases, when given early enough, that it may truly be regarded as a specific remedy.

Paying for Moonshine.

At the bend of the road the young mountaineer turned down a ravine and in fifteen minutes we saw him coming back with something under his coat.

"What are you going to give him?" I asked.

"Seventy-five cents," said the agent decisively.

"Oh, give him a dollar anyhow. He walked two miles."

ADDRESS BY A. R. BRODBECK

DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE FOR CONGRESS IN 20TH DISTRICT.

In Which He Sounds the Keynote of Campaign—Government by People Against Government by a Few.

Andrew R. Brodbeck, the Democratic nominee for Congress in this district before the Young Men's Democratic Society of York made the opening speech of his campaign and plainly stated the issues awaiting the decision of the voters, as follows:

"I esteem it a pleasure to be with you upon this occasion to address you upon certain topics of the campaign and to consider matters of vital importance appertaining to us as individuals and to our nation.

"This is a campaign which in its scope of interest is significantly characteristic and differs materially from preceding campaigns in that party lines are practically eliminated and the personal interest of the common people becomes the main issue.

"The condition of our national affairs has reached a point that is practically intolerable, and it is not a question in this campaign whether you are a Democrat or a Republican, but is a question how to conserve the best interests of the people irrespective of party affiliation.

"The certain proof that this is the keynote is the fact that the Insurgent Republicans themselves set the pace in overthrowing their own party's iniquitous handiwork by aiding and assisting the Democrats in the last Congress in preserving the Democratic form of government.

"A certain Republican paper recently came out in strong headlines, stating that this is not a campaign where the paramount issue is Republicanism vs. Democracy, or Protection vs. Free Trade, but it is Democracy vs. Oligarchy, or a Government by the people against a Government by a few.

"It is important to note that the present uprising of the people throughout our land, justified by righteous indignation, demands relief from monopolistic and trust controlled legislation, which is Cannonism pure and simple.

"The only way to bring relief is through the policies and principles represented by the Democratic party, tariff revision downward, anti-trust legislation and retrenchment in the present extravagant expenditures of the public money.

"Not many years ago you and I were mocked and vilified by Republicans with all kinds of epithets for advocating tariff reform, declaring it to mean free trade and pauper wages, while thousands of dependent men were intimidated and forced to vote the Republican ticket under the threat that any other action would deprive them of protection and the full dinner pail. The Republican party persistently insisted upon the imperative necessity of protection. Protection to infant industries and similar slogans were familiar in those days.

"These infant industries were fostered by favored and discriminating tariff laws until they grew to be greedy-monsters. Finally they developed into monopolies and later began absorbing each other under the tender name of trusts, yet this party of protection permits these greedy and menacing trusts to go on unrestricted regardless of the consequences to the people.

Nation in Revolt.

"All this was accomplished without arousing general suspicion. The Republican leaders and their henchman had the fullest confidence of the people of their party and it only dawned upon the mind and attention of the rank and file of the Republican voters during the last sessions of Congress that something must be radically wrong somewhere, for taxation became higher, and a promised revision of the tariff downward resulted in a revision upward. Along with this came a constant and intolerable advance in almost everything that is needed in the family and household, the struggling and impoverished laborer and poor man bearing more than his share of the burden. The outraged, disappointed and hitherto deceived people, who are the victims of party boosters, are today arrayed in a mighty army against the party and the senators and representatives who are the tools of combines and trusts and who occupy seats in the national Congress to do their bidding. So strong is this uprising against these unworthy men, or standpatters, that in order to save them the campaign howlers are again attempting to deceive and bluff the poor but honest laborers by promises and by citing disaster and poverty to them if any reduction in the tariff is attempted.

"In this congressional district the machine boosters are avoiding the real issues of tariff revision and Cannonism by attempting to pull the wool of post office bribery over the people's eyes, as if the paramount duty of your representative was to get public buildings or useless offices for political henchmen.

"The tariff is an important issue and I could submit many interesting figures and statistics, but for want of time must forego doing so in detail. You will remember the Dingley tariff bill was passed in 1897, and almost simultaneously with it the era of trusts swept down upon the unsuspecting people of our nation. Inside of five years trusts were organized having a total capitalization of $14,000,000,000. It is a feature of the trusts that they flourish only under the shadow of high protective tariff walls. They destroy domestic competition by consolidation and absorption. They control production, fix the selling price of manufactured products and control prices upon raw material coming within the scope of their power. The amazing greed of the favored combines and trusts is best reflected in the unreasonably and vicious Payne-Aldrich tariff bill passed by the last session of congress, which was concocted and framed by members of Congress, agents for the trusts, put there by the trusts, and who did the bidding of the trusts under the generalship of Speaker Cannon and Senator Aldrich.

Blame the Farmer

"You will remember that when Congress became alarmed at the rapid and unwarranted advance in the cost of living a congressional commission was appointed to investigate the cause. This commission after some investigation, and after spending a great deal of time and money, made quite an exhaustive report. In summing up the result of this investigation we find them placing the greater part of the responsibility for this high cost of living upon the farmer. Oh, the poor farmer. He is himself the victim of tariff extortion, and now the tariff boosters seek to load upon his shoulders the blame that properly rests upon the tariff itself. When you know that the chairman of that commission was a standpatter and a Cannon man, and that the majority of the commission were standpatters and Cannon men, you can understand better why such a false report was made.

"How about the loud cry of protection, the full dinner pail, happy homes and other arguments of the trust agents who insisted that protection meant high wages for the working man? Statistics show that wages advanced only about twenty-two per cent. during the past twelve years, while the cost of living advanced sixty per cent. With such a disparity of benefit for the working man, under Cannonism it would seem that the full dinner pail has been reduced to a sandwich and the happy home is still a thing of the future.

"There are many items in the Payne-Aldrich-Cannon tariff bill to which we might refer that are notoriously unjust and burdensome upon the poor man. You know what they are, and it is not necessary to take up your time by repeating them. Let us remember that this Payne-Aldrich-Cannon bill was signed by President Taft, who did so knowing and saying that it was not what it should be. He signed it in spite of the promises of himself and his party before his election that they would revise the tariff downward. This failure to do as they promised not only affected the Democrats and disappointed them, but it disappointed the progressive Republicans as well, and it affected the man of moderate means everywhere regardless of his party affiliations. Next we find this same Mr. Taft declaring it the best tariff law ever passed. Now, after realizing that a revolt on the part of the people has set in, Mr. Taft becomes alarmed and begs the people to trust him and his party once more, promising to be good and revise the tariff schedule by schedule. There must be something wrong, or why should he thus get down upon his knees before a deceived people?

Wasting Money.

"Let us consider briefly the policy of extravagance that has had free rein in Congress under Cannon control. The last session of Congress created 26,959 new offices or berths for political henchmen. The increased expenditure of the people's money for salaries and other expenses connected with these new offices amounts to $89,568,577.88.

"The total appropriation for the fifty-fourth Congress, the last under Grover Cleveland's Democratic administration, amounted to $954,496,055.

"The total appropriations for the sixtieth Congress, under the last Roosevelt Republican administration, amounted to $2,052,799,400. This shows an increase of over one hundred per cent under Cannonism and Aldrichism. The appropriations under Mr. Taft's last year total $1,098,847,184, or $3,567,855.65 for every working day in the year. All of this in the face of an increasing monthly deficit and in the face of a public admission that if the affairs of the government were conducted upon the same basis as a business man would conduct his individual enterprises, the princely sum of $300,000,000 could be saved annually.

"Why is this great waste of the public's money and who is responsible for it? If you had a man in charge of your business who spent more money than you took in you would be compelled to put a better and safer manager in his place, or your failure in business would be inevitable. The same policy holds good for the government. If the credit of the government is to be maintained, the present standpatter Cannon crowd must be put out and other men put in. The Democratic party has a record for economical administration of the affairs of the government of which it may well be proud. Retrenchment in governmental expenses must be enforced, and it is up to the voters to put Democrats in power in order to assure this retrenchment.

"It was a fortunate circumstance that enough of the honest Republicans now called insurgents were willing to stand with the Democrats in Congress to assail the autocratic power assumed by Mr. Cannon. As far as it went it was a victory for representative government and the people's rights against Cannonism. Cannonism is the opposite of Democracy. It is antagonistic to that fundamental principle of high protective tariff

TESTED AND PROVEN

There is a Heap of Solace in Being Able to Depend Upon a Well-Earned Reputation.

For months Gettysburg readers have seen the constant expression of praise for Doan's Kidney Pills, and read about the good work they have done in this locality. Not another remedy ever produced such convincing proof of merit.

Mrs. Charles Kennel, 401 S. Washington St., Gettysburg, Pa., says: "I publicly recommended Doan's Kidney Pills two years ago and I have not changed my opinion of them. I still consider this remedy the best one on the market for kidney trouble. A member of my family suffered from rheumatism and kidney complaint and was subject to acute attacks of backache. There was a stiffness and lameness across the loins especially noticeable in the morning, and a tired, languid feeling was in evidence. Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at the People's Drug Store, brought the first relief that had ever been received and when they have been taken since then, benefit has always followed. It gives me great pleasure to tell of the merits of this remedy."

principle which demands a government of the people, for the people and by the people. Its idea of government is that it should be one where the people are controlled by the grater in the interests of the trusts. Cannon has been jolted, Cannonism has been branded and the complete overthrow of the trust-made dictator, his allies and his vicious system will be consummated by the voice of the people speaking through their ballots on the 8th of next November.

Voiced for Cannon

"The record of the votes of your present member of Congress shows him to be a friend of the combines and trusts and a servant of Cannon. His acts and votes show conclusively that the standpat policies must have been his orders from the bosses and that he obeyed them. He voted for the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill, which helps the trusts and hurts you. He voted for Cannon, who helps the trusts and promotes Cannonism. By his vote he sustained Cannon in his nefarious schemes and autocratic domineering tendencies.

If it is the will of a majority of the voters of this Twentieth Congressional district that I should represent them in the Congress of the United States, I will solemnly pledge myself to be unswervingly true and loyal to the fundamental principles of Jeffersonian Democracy, which will insure a government of the people, for the people, and by the people; a government which will provide equal opportunities to all, equal and exact justice to all, special privileges to none; a government that will take class legislation, special privileges, extortion and robbery out of the tariff system, and that will lower the walls behind which the trusts and combines have grown up; that will bring back just laws and constitutional taxation under a tariff sufficient for the needs of the government, economically administered, with due regard to ample protection for the laboring man and the wage earner against the importation of foreign cheap labor.

"I am in favor of liberal pension laws for deserving veterans who made sacrifices for the preservation of the union and now in their declining days should be liberally rewarded.

"I am unalterably opposed to the election of United States senators by the legislatures of the states under the present system. What we want is to elect our senatorial representatives in Congress by the direct vote of the people.

"A vote for me for Congress will be a vote against Cannon and Cannonism, against monopolies and trusts, against the high cost of living, against governmental extravagance, for tariff revision downward, for the farmer's and working man's interest.

"If the sentiment herein expressed coincides with your views, with the assurance that I will with fair and honest consideration defend and promote the best interests of the citizens of this district in all matters incumbent upon me to defend, I must respectfully ask you for your vote and active support at the coming election on November 8th."

Eddie Plank Tells of his Start.

"They all say I got my start the day of the battle of Gettysburg, but they exaggerate somewhat," said Eddie Plank. "I was born in Gettysburg in 1875, and that gave the boys a chance to say things. I admit the 1875 without trying to get away and scalp half a dozen years off my age as some of them do.

"At any rate, I think I am rather a freak as a baseball player because I seldom have heard of any case anything like my own.

"As I told you, I was born in Gettysburg and I played some baseball around there in an amateur way, and without giving the game much thought. You see, I had other things to do, and down in Gettysburg we regard baseball as a Fourth of July and Saturday amusement rather than a business. Honestly, I never even read the scores or knew who played in the big leagues until I was 20 years old. Gettysburg looked big enough for me, and when I could play ball I played because I liked the running and the throwing and everything else. I didn't know a squeeze play from third base hardly. All I wanted to do was to beat the other fellows.

"I started to college about the time most of the other fellows are getting enough. I was 25 when I began pitching for the Gettysburg College team, and I was big and strong and fast and wild and inexperienced and everything else that goes to make up a college pitcher. I simply shut my eyes and cut loose and most of those who didn't strike out got bases on balls, and I have suspected since that a lot of them struck out just to escape from standing up there at the bat.

"Seriously, I think the real reason for my start was that I was older, stronger and better developed than the average college man. That made me stand out among them and it attracted the attention of professional clubs. I had not thought of baseball as a profession at all until offered a job, and I joined the Athletics in May, 1901, after school closed, knowing about as much about major league baseball as I know about who will make a three-base hit in the morning game next Decoration Day. I started right out to pitch the way I did at school, just wait till I saw the whites of their eyes and then shoot. I must say I got away with it luckily. I was actually after wounded a flock of ball players. Suddenly I saw I had more was more to it than throwing a ball as possible and saving them. I saw

I would have to do something and I began to study the game. Queerly enough, I went wrong right away. I was guessing wrong, but luckily for me I had enough speed and shoots to hang on by sheer power until I learned more. I worked and studied hard at the game, watched the other pitchers, picked up their tricks and began to pitch with much less exertion and strain and still get results. If I had gone on the way I started I would have been out of it in two seasons, and I'm still here. On the other hand, if I had known as much when I started about pitching, I'd be here a long time. This is a frank confession, but you say you want it for the benefit of young players, and no one needs to be told more than the new pitcher does, even if it is only to keep him from throwing his arm away."

LOCAL CASE IN POINT

Williamsport Sun Proves Accuracy of Senator Grim's Criticism.

Senator Grim, Democratic candidate for governor, in his speech at Meyersdale the other evening, pointed out an iniquitous feature of the present method of state road building that has a pertinent illustration of fact in the Mifflin township road, in this county. Mr. Grim said:

"The method of allowing contractors extras for changed plans and specifications on roads should be abolished. Last year over a quarter of a million dollars, or one-twelfth of the whole amount appropriated, was paid to contractors for extras upon the decree of one man, and the counties and townships were obliged to bear their share of expense without any recourse."

The attempt made by the same highway department to ignore the contract specifications for the Mifflin township road is still fresh in the public mind, as is also the fact that the change in construction upon that road has increased the price nearly $3000, this, too, in the face of the luxurious price that is being paid for the road-way built even according to the original specifications. The high handed methods of the state highway department—against which is charged the game of politics—was shown in the fact that the people were not consulted in the change made in the road's construction and when public attention was drawn to the radical departure from specifications the reason was given that the department desired to "experiment" with new material.

The faults and failures of the state highway department have been of so long standing, and so egregious a nature, that the Republican administration has no ground for excuse for not having long since directed its course in both a more economical and a more effective channel, and the grilling given it by Senator Grim is none too vigorous nor are his criticisms undeserved. It is right that the political machine governing the affairs of Pennsylvania should be held responsible for the shortcomings of the highway department, and the Mifflin township incident in our own community serves as an illuminating case in point as tending to show the things at which Senator Grim was striking.

THREATS IN BUCKS COUNTY

Penrose Machine Tried a Bugaboo Which Failed.

Fearing that the popularity of Senator Webster Grim in his home district will result not only in giving the Democratic gubernatorial nominee a record-breaking vote, but also in sending a Democrat to the senate to succeed Mr. Grim, the Penrose machine leaders are using threats to intimidate the citizens of Bucks county. The voters have been notified that unless a Republican is chosen to succeed Grim in the senate, a reapportionment of senatorial lines will be made by the next legislature and the district made Republican. This they propose to do by joining Bucks with some Republican county adjoining.

The threat, which was carried to the people of Bucks county by Congressman Wanger in the interests of the Penrose machine, has already reacted against the Republican gang. Bucks county has been stirred from end to end by this cowardly attempt at intimidation and the voters have served notice on the corrupt Republican combination that every man proposes now to take his coat off for Senator Grim and the whole Democratic ticket. At the same time they defy Penrose to carry out his threat.

Bucks county was originally a Republican district, but the candidacy of Mr. Grim for the state senate eight years ago brought it into the Democratic column. Republicans and Democrats joined in his support and sent him to the senate for two terms. He served his constituents so well that Bucks county has been swinging to the Democratic column to the chagrin of Republican leaders. In the reapportionment of 1905 the Penrose gang endeavored to eliminate Bucks county as a senatorial district, but through the splendid fight put up by Senator Grim they were defeated.

GRIM WILL NOT WITHDRAW

Is Firm in Purpose of Fulfilling Party Obligations.

COURSE CORDIALLY APPROVED

Fairly Nominated, He Will Remain in the Field and Welcomes the Support of All Citizens.

Nine very estimable and influential gentlemen, citizens of Philadelphia, have addressed an open letter to Webster Grim, the Democratic nominee for governor, and William H. Berry, the candidate of the Keystone Party for the same office, asking them to withdraw "in favor of a candidate whom both parties could concentrate upon." The writers of the letter are said to be independent Republicans who have thus far taken no part in the present campaign, but are unalterably opposed to the Penrose machine. They profess to believe that with the vote of the opposition to the machine divided between Grim and Berry the success of the machine candidate is assured.

The day the letter was made public Mr. Berry was in Harrisburg and privately stated to his friends that "under no circumstances would he withdraw." That evening, at a session of the executive committee of his party, held in the Bellevue-Stratford hotel, Philadelphia, a letter was read by the chairman of the committee, signed by Mr. Berry, in which he practically said that he is willing to withdraw if the executive committee of his party favored that course and Mr. Grim would follow his example. Of course his statement in Harrisburg expressed his real sentiments, and that contained in his letter to Chairman Hicks was for the consumption of the public.

Senator Grim, upon hearing of the letter, promptly and emphatically declared that he will not withdraw. "Nothing is further from my heart and purpose," he said, "I never entertained such an idea." Subsequently he received hundreds of telegrams and letters urging him to remain on the ticket. He was fairly nominated and is justly entitled to the support of his party. No well informed citizen can see the excuse that he doesn't know the Democratic nominee. He has served eight years in the senate and been a leader in every movement for legislative reform. Any man who doesn't know Grim is unfamiliar with the public life of the commonwealth, for he has been an ornament in it.

Besides, Webster Grim is the nominee of the Democratic party and that party was not organized and isn't maintained to "beat" anybody. It represents principles and its purpose is to give force and effect to those principles. A political organization with no higher mission than to beat some individual or group of individuals would not be worth preserving and certainly wouldn't endure as the Democratic party has endured from the foundation of the government. The party has commissioned Mr. Grim to represent it in this crucial period in the political life of the state, and to fail of the fulfillment of that obligation would be recreancy, and Webster Grim is not a recreant.

William H. Berry, on the other hand, is the nominee of no party, though he is the candidate of a contingent of uncertain quantity. He was named by half a dozen persons, two of whom, John C. Sheatz and J. Heber Clarke, have already abandoned him. Raising Mr. Berry to the level of a real candidate, under such circumstances, would be a real distinction. But he has no intention of thus immolating himself. He is running for governor in obedience to his insatiable thirst for office, and he would accept the nomination of any party or combination of men. If the Keystone Party had not nominated him he probably wouldn't have supported the party. He cares less for principle than for patronage.

If the nine estimable gentlemen are really anxious to prevent a division of the reform vote at the coming election they can contribute to that result in a much more practical way than that suggested in their letter to Senator Grim and Mr. Berry. They can simply vote for Mr. Grim themselves and persuade all their friends, and others who think and feel as they do, to pursue the same course. They cannot doubt that the interests of the people would be as safe in the hands of Webster Grim as in those of any other man they might be named. His public record is an open book and a radiant page of achievement in the interest of good government. Why should such a man be humiliated or aspersed?

The division of the vote of citizens who are opposed to the Penrose machine is unfortunate beyond question. But there is no necessity for such division of forces. Every fair-minded man, irrespective of past political affiliation, can vote for Webster Grim without the least reservation or qualification. He represents no special interest and is the creature of no boss or group of bosses. He is an able, conscientious and courageous public servant and will be faithful to the people in whatever station he is placed. I am an old citizen and have seen many a man who has been nominated by the Penrose machine.

Dietterich, of New Chester gave the address of the evening, taking the text from Exodus, 21st chap., 29th ver. He applied it to the Liquor traffic, showing who were responsible for the harm that is done by business.

The ladies of the Presbyterian church will have a luncheon Thursday evening, Oct. 13th, at the residence of Jacob Slonaker, York St., from 5 o'clock, p. m., sandwiches, coffee, ice cream, etc. The public invited.

Temporary Heat Quickly

Did you ever stop to think of the many ways in which a perfect oil heater is of value? If you want to sleep with your window open in winter, you can get sufficient heat from an oil heater. While you undress at night, and then turn it off. Apply a match in the morning, when you get out of bed, and you have heat while you dress.

PERFECTION
SMOKELESS
OIL HEATER
Absolutely smokeless and odorless

Is invaluable in its capacity of quickly giving heat. Apply a match and it is immediately at work. It will burn for nine hours without refilling. It is safe, smokeless and odorless. It has a damper top and a cool handle. An indicator always shows the amount of oil in the font.

It has an automatic-locking flame spreader which prevents the wick from being turned high enough to smoke, and is easy to remove and drop back so that the wick can be cleaned in an instant.

The burner body or gallery cannot become wedged, and can be quickly unscrewed for reworking. Finished in Japan or nickel, strong, durable, well-made, built for service, and yet light and ornamental.

Tickling in the Throat

"Just a little tickling in the throat." Is that what troubles you? But it hangs on! Can't get rid of it! Home remedies don't take hold. You need something stronger—a regular medicine, a doctor's medicine. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral contains healing, quieting, and soothing properties of the highest order. Ask your doctor about this. No alcohol in this cough medicine. J. C. Tier Co., Lowell, Mass.

Consumption positively prevented by Ayer's. Then why allow it to continue? An active liver is a great preventive of disease. Ayer's Pills act on the liver. What does your doctor say?

THD OCTOBER MAGAZINES

"That's nothing to him."
"He'll have to go for more," I urged.
"That's nothing—time and distance mean nothing to these fellows." The young fellow pulled a quart bottle from his coat that seemed to be filled with water, and the following formula was now gone through:
"If you were over in Kentucky now," said the agent, "and wanted a quart of liquor, how much would you give for it?" The moonshiner answered with perfect seriousness:
"This ain't a full quart, but it was, I'd leave seventy-five cents." The agent drew three quarters from his pocket.
"Well, I am giving you anything, I'm just going to play crack-a-loo with that wagon crack," and forthwith he slowly and skillfully tossed the coins at the rut in the road, the mountaineer watching him without a smile.
We left him there standing by the quarters, and once I started to look back.
"No use," said the agent, "he won't pick 'em up till we are out of sight.
He can't swear we gave him the money, and we can't swear that he took it, and there you are."—From "On the Trail of the Lonesome Pine," by John Fox, Jr., in the October Scribner.

Overlord of the Wires.

How many people could tell off-hand what the second largest industrial organization in the world is? HUN-MAN LIFE for October carries the intimateliest story of the man who guides the destinies of this gigantic enterprise—Theodore N. Vail, chief of the great American Telephone and Telegraph Company.
This man who rose from farmer lad to world financier, gravitated back to New England farmland again with his well-earned millions, only to be again called from his chosen life of leisure, after many years, to the head of the great organization his business genius had moulded. Is certainly a unique
tains of industry. It is a story that should fire the heart of every young man with ambition, and will make mighty interesting reading for older folk.

The White Coal of the Sierras.

In the October SUNSET Magazine is told the wonderful new story of this age, the harnessing of waters by Clayton M. Jones under title "Greater than Gold." He says California is the second in water-power development in the United States and, with the completion of the river harnessing feats now going on, will be head and shoulders above any other state in the Union. The largest and latest harnessing of the rivers is occurring in this state, from which it is expected that in the near future she will double her present development of 466,744 horse power. Nowhere in the world are as great river-harnessing feats under way as where the Sierra slopes toward the Pacific coast line.

Kit Carson, Typical Pioneer.

In selecting Kit Carson as the crowning figure for his memorial to the pioneers, which is to be unveiled in Denver, Col., Mr. MacMonies chose wisely.
As historians and writers of western romance picture him, Kit Carson was solely an Indian fighter and scout. He was a sagacious civic chieftain as well as an intrepid leader in war, Indian, foreign and civil; a wise counselor of red men and white;
a man who touched the West's wild life at more points than any other person of any day; a man who blazed trails on which great commonwealths were afterwards built, and who helped to build them.—From Charles M.
Harvey's "Kit Carson, Last of the Trail Makers," in October Century.

Amazing Growth of Fairs.

Today there are in the United States thirty-eight State fairs and expositions and something like six hundred county fairs, and the number and the quality of these institutions have grown because they have performed important functions. Millions are de-riving benefit directly by attendance on State fairs, and other millions are getting an indirect benefit.

The total attendance of only seven out of the thirty-eight State fairs of the country are in the Fall of 1909 was more than one million, and these seven were not selected just to make a showing.

The figures are: Iowa, 250,000; Wisconsin, 122,000; Minnesota, 122,000; Ohio, 122,000; Nebraska, 122,000; Kansas, 122,000; Missouri, 122,000; Ky-entucky, 122,000. "The Delinquent for October."

Difficulty of Securing Help on Farms.

In New England it is evident that in farming the East must begin all over again, and must set the new pace. The old-time methods will not longer; it is a question of proper equipment and fertilization, as in the South. The terrible drought of the large crops has made it extremely difficult to obtain help for the farm work.
Many young men will take the hazard of seeking in city parks or in basement lodgings rather than work on the farm, and it is for this reason that the great problem of today is to eliminate the drudgery of farm work and make it more inviting to the twentieth century lad. From what will the cities be recruited when the heavy boys from the farm are no longer available?—Joe Mitchell Chapman, in "The Harvest of 1910," in the National Magazine for October.

Eggs by the Pound.

By fixed tradition anything pertaining to the egg industry is a most amusing joke—the older the egg the more irresistible the joke. It is not surprising, therefore, that a New York official's proposal that eggs be sold by weight rather than number should be greeted with loud editorial laughter. Of course eggs vary in size, the editors admitted, but after all

"eggs are eggs," and it is their nature to be sold by the dozen. The way another bought eggs is good enough for us.

Hopeless, slavish conservatism this:
egg progress is slow and tortuous. We denounce doctored scales and short weights, fake bottles, strawberry boxes and high bottoms: we have a wholesome contempt for the grocer who puts all the big peaches on top and mixes sand in the sugar. But we buy eggs by the dozen regardless of size until the very hens have seemed to see the futility of laying large eggs and the omelet languishes and fades away.—From October "Success" Magazine.

principle which demands a government of the people, for the people and by the people. Its idea of government is that it should be one where the people are controlled by the grater in the interests of the trusts. Cannon has been jolted, Cannonism has been branded and the complete overthrow of the trust-made dictator, his allies and his vicious system will be consummated by the voice of the people speaking through their ballots on the 8th of next November.

Voiced for Cannon

"The record of the votes of your present member of Congress shows him to be a friend of the combines and trusts and a servant of Cannon. His acts and votes shows conclusively that the standpat policies must have been his orders from the bosses and that he obeyed them. He voted for the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill, which helps the trusts and hurts you. He voted for Cannon, who helps the trusts and promotes Cannonism. By his vote he sustained Cannon in his nefarious schemes and autocratic domineering tendencies.

If it is the will of a majority of the voters of this Twentieth Congressional district that I should represent them in the Congress of the United States, I will solemnly pledge myself to be unwaveringly true and loyal to the fundamental principles of Jeffersonian Democracy, which will insure a government of the people, for the people, and by the people; a government which will provide equal opportunities to all, equal and exact justice to all, special privileges to none; a government that will take class legislation, special privileges, extortion and robbery out of the tariff system, and that will lower the walls behind which the trusts and combines have grown up; that will bring back just laws and constitutional taxation under a tariff sufficient for the needs of the government, economically administered, with due regard to ample protection for the laboring man and the wage earner against the importation of foreign cheap labor.

"I am in favor of liberal pension laws for deserving veterans who made sacrifices for the preservation of the union and now in their declining days should be liberally rewarded.

"I am unalterably opposed to the election of United States senators by the legislatures of the states under the present system. What we want is to elect our senatorial representatives in Congress by the direct vote of the people.

"A vote for me for Congress will be a vote against Cannon and Cannonism, against monopolies and trusts, against the high cost of living, against governmental extravagance, for tariff revision downward, for the farmer's and working man's interest.

"If the sentiment herein expressed coincides with your views, with the assurance that I will with fair and honest consideration defend and promote the best interests of the citizens of this district in all matters incumbent upon me to defend, I must respectfully ask you for your vote and active support at the coming election on November 8th."

Eddie Plank Tells of his Start.

"They all say I got my start the day of the battle of Gettysburg, but they exaggerate somewhat," said Eddie Plank. "I was born in Gettysburg in 1875, and that gave the boys a chance to say things. I admit the 1875 without trying to get away and scalp half a dozen years off my age as some of them do.

"At any rate, I think I am rather a fresh as a baseball player because I seldom have heard of any case anything like my own.

"As I told you, I was born in Gettysburg and I played some baseball around there in an amateur way, and without giving the game much thought. You see, I had other things to do, and down in Gettysburg we regard baseball as a Fourth of July and Saturday amusement rather than a business. Honestly, I never even read the scores or knew who played in the big leagues until I was 20 years old. Gettysburg looked big enough for me, and when I could play ball I played because I liked the running and the throwing and everything else. I didn't know a squeeze play from third base hardly. All I wanted to do was to beat the other fellows.

"I started to college about the time most of the other fellows are getting enough. I was 25 when I began pitching for the Gettysburg College team, and I was big and strong and fast and wild and inexperienced and everything else that goes to make up a college pitcher. I simply shut my eyes and cut loose and most of those who didn't strike out got bases on balls, and I have suspected since that a lot of them struck out just to escape from standing up there at the bat.

"Seriously, I think the real reason for my start was that I was older, stronger and better developed than the average college man. That made me stand out among them and it attracted the attention of professional clubs. I had not thought of baseball as a profession at all until offered a job, and I joined the Athletics in May, 1901, after school closed. Knowing about as much about major league baseball as I know about who will make a three-base hit in the morning game next Decoration Day. I started right out to pitch the way I did at school, just wait till I saw the whites of their eyes and then shoot. I must say I got away with it luckily especially after wounding a flock of ball players. Suddenly I saw that there was more to it than throwing as hard as possible and curving them. I saw

I would have to do some thinking and I began to study the game. Queerly enough, I went wrong right away. I was guessing wrong, but luckily for me I had enough speed and shoots to hang on by sheer power until I learned more. I worked and studied hard at the game, watched the other pitchers, picked up their tricks and began to pitch with much less exertion and strain and still get results. If I had gone on the way I started I would have been out of it in two seasons, and I'm still here. On the other hand, if I had known as much when I started about pitching, I'd be here a long time. This is a frank confession, but you say you want it for the benefit of young players, and no one needs to be told more than the new pitcher does, even if it is only to keep him from throwing his arm away."

LOCAL CASE IN POINT

Williamsport Sun Proves Accuracy of Senator Grim's Criticism.

Senator Grim, Democratic candidate for governor, in his speech at Meyersdale the other evening, pointed out an iniquitous feature of the present method of state road building that has a pertinent illustration of fact in the Milfin township road, in this county. Mr. Grim said:

"The method of allowing contractors extras for changed plans and specifications on roads should be abolished. Last year over a quarter of a million dollars, or one-twelfth of the whole amount appropriated, was paid to contractors for extras upon the decree of one man, and the counties and townships were obliged to bear their share of expense without any recourse."

The attempt made by the same highway department to ignore the contract specifications for the Milfin township road is still fresh in the public mind, as is also the fact that the change in construction upon that road has increased the price nearly $3000, this, too, in the face of the luxuriant price that is being paid for the road-way built even according to the original specifications. The high handed methods of the state highway department—against which is charged the game of politics—was shown in the fact that the people were not consulted in the change made in the road's construction and when public attention was drawn to the radical departure from specifications the reason was given that the department desired to "experiment" with new material.

The faults and failures of the state highway department have been of so long standing, and so egregious a nature, that the Republican administration has no ground for excuse for not having long since directed its course in both a more economical and a more effective channel, and the grilling given it by Senator Grim is none too vigorous nor are his criticisms undeserved. It is right that the political machine governing the affairs of Pennsylvania should be held responsible for the shortcomings of the highway department, and the Milfin township incident in our own community serves as an illuminating case in point as tending to show the things at which Senator Grim was striking.

Penrose Machine Tried, a Bugaboo Which Failed.

Fearing that the popularity of Senator Webster Grim in his home district will result not only in giving the Democratic gubernatorial nominee a record-breaking vote, but also in sending a Democrat to the senate to succeed Mr. Grim, the Penrose machine leaders are using threats to intimidate the citizens of Bucks county. The voters have been notified that unless a Republican is chosen to succeed Grim in the senate, a reapportionment of senatorial lines will be made by the next legislature and the district made Republican. This they propose to do by joining Bucks with some Republican county adjoining.

The threat, which was carried to the people of Bucks county by Congressman Wanger in the interests of the Penrose machine, has already reacted against the Republican gang. Bucks county has been stirred from end to end by this cowardly attempt at intimidation and the voters have served notice on the corrupt Republican combination that every man proposes now to take his coat off for Senator Grim and the whole Democratic ticket. At the same time they defy Penrose to carry out his threat.

Bucks county was originally a Republican district, but the candidacy of Mr. Grim for the state senate eight years ago brought it into the Democratic column. Republicans and Democrats joined in his support and sent him to the senate for two terms. He served his constituents so well that Bucks county has been swinging to the Democratic column to the chagrin of Republican leaders. In the reapportionment of 1906 the Penrose gang endeavored to eliminate Bucks county as a senatorial district, but through the splendid fight put up by Senator Grim they were defeated.

GRIM WILL NOT WITHDRAW

Is Firm in Purpose of Fulfilling Party Obligations.

COURSE CORDIALLY APPROVED:

Fairly Nominated, He Will Remain in the Field and Welcomes the Support of All Citizens.

Nine very estimable and influential gentlemen, citizens of Philadelphia, have addressed an open letter to Webster Grim, the Democratic nominee for governor, and William H. Berry, the candidate of the Keystone Party for the same office, asking them to withdraw "in favor of a candidate whom both parties could concentrate upon." The writers of the letter are said to be independent Republicans who have thus far taken no part in the present campaign, but are unalterably opposed to the Penrose machine. They profess to believe that with the vote of the opposition to the machine divided between Grim and Berry the success of the machine candidate is assured.

The day the letter was made public Mr. Berry was in Harrisburg and privately stated to his friends that "under no circumstances would he withdraw." That evening, at a session of the executive committee of his party, held in the Bellevue-Stratford hotel, Philadelphia, a letter was read by the chairman of the committee, signed by Mr. Berry, in which he practically said that he is willing to withdraw if the executive committee of his party favored that course and Mr. Grim would follow his example. Of course his statement in Harrisburg expressed his real sentiments, and that contained in his letter to Chairman Hicks was for the consumption of the public.

Senator Grim, upon hearing of the letter, promptly and emphatically declared that he will not withdraw. "Nothing is further from my heart and purpose," he said. "I never entertained such an idea." Subsequently he received hundreds of telegrams and letters urging him to remain on the ticket. He was fairly nominated and is justly entitled to the support of his party. No well informed citizen can set up the excuse that he doesn't know the Democratic nominee. He has served eight years in the senate and been a leader in every movement for legislative reform. Any man who doesn't know Grim is unfamiliar with the public life of the commonwealth, for he has been an ornament in it.

Besides, Webster Grim is the nominee of the Democratic party and that party was not organized and isn't maintained to "beat" anybody. It represents principles and its purpose is to give force and effect to those principles. A political organization with no higher mission than to beat some individual or group of individuals would not be worth preserving and certainly wouldn't endure as the Democratic party has endured from the foundation of the government. The party has commissioned Mr. Grim to represent it in this crucial period in the political life of the state, and to fail of the fulfillment of that obligation would be recreancy, and Webster Grim is not a recreant.

William H. Berry, on the other hand, is the nominee of no party, though he is the candidate of a contingent of uncertain quantity. He was named by half a dozen persons, two of whom, John O. Sheatz and J. Heber Clarke, have already abandoned him. Raising Mr. Berry to the level of a real candidate, under such circumstances, would be a real distinction. But he has no intention of thus immolating himself. He is running for governor in obedience to his insatiable thirst for office, and he would accept the nomination of any party or combination of men. If the Keystone Party had not nominated him he probably wouldn't have supported the party. He cares less for principle than for patronage.

If the nine estimable gentlemen are really anxious to prevent a division of the reform vote at the coming election they can contribute to that result in a much more practical way than that suggested in their letter to Senator Grim and Mr. Berry. They can simply vote for Mr. Grim themselves and persuade all their friends, and others who think and feel as they do, to pursue the same course. They cannot doubt that the interests of the people would be as safe in the hands of Webster Grim as in those of any other man that might be named. His public record is an open book and a radiant page of achievement in the interest of good government. Why should such a man be humiliated or aspersed?

The division of the vote of citizens who are opposed to the Penrose machine is unfortunate beyond question. But there is no necessity for such division of forces. Every fair-minded man, irrespective of past political affiliation, can vote for Webster Grim without the least reservation or stultification. He represents no special interest and is the creature of no boss or group of bosses. He is an able, conscientious and courageous public servant and will be faithful to the people in whatever station he is placed. If any citizen desires to provide civic righteousness in the election of a governor of Pennsylvania, let him vote for Webster Grim.

ADDRESS BY A. R. BRODBECK

DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE FOR CONGRESS IN 20TH DISTRICT.

In Which He Sounds the Keynote of Campaign—Government by People Against Government by a Few.

Andrew R. Brodbeck, the Democratic nominee for Congress in this district before the Young Men's Democratic Society of York made the opening speech of his campaign and plainly stated the issues awaiting the decision of the voters, as follows:

"I esteem it a pleasure to be with you upon this occasion to address you upon certain topics of the campaign and to consider matters of vital importance appertaining to us as individuals and to our nation.

"This is a campaign which in its scope of interest is significantly characteristic and differs materially from preceding campaigns in that party lines are practically eliminated and the personal interest of the common people becomes the main issue.

"The condition of our national affairs has reached a point that is practically intolerable, and it is not a question in this campaign whether you are a Democrat or a Republican, but is a question how to conserve the best interests of the people irrespective of party affiliation.

"The certain proof that this is the keynote is the fact that the Insurgent Republicans themselves set the pace in overthrowing their own party's iniquitous handiwork by aiding and assisting the Democrats in the last Congress in preserving the Democratic form of government.

"A certain Republican paper recently came out in strong headlines, stating that this is not a campaign where the paramount issue is Republicanism vs. Democracy, or Protection vs. Free Trade, but it is Democracy vs. Oligarchy, or a Government by the people against a Government by a few.

"It is important to note that the present uprising of the people throughout our land, justified by righteous indignation, demands relief from monopolistic and trust controlled legislation, which is Cannonism pure and simple. The only way to bring relief is through the policies and principles represented by the Democratic party, tariff revision downward, anti-trust legislation and retrenchment in the present extravagant expenditures of the public money.

"Not many years ago you and I were mocked and vilified by Republicans with all kinds of epithets for advocating tariff reform, declaring it to mean free trade and pauper wages, while thousands of dependent men were intimidated and forced to vote the Republican ticket under the threat that any other action would deprive them of protection and the full dinner pail. The Republican party persistently insisted upon the imperative necessity of protection. Protection to infant industries and similar slogans were familiar in those days.

"These infant industries were fostered by favored and discriminating tariff laws until they grew to be greedy monsters. Finally they developed into monopolies and later began absorbing each other under the tender name of trusts, yet this party of protection permits these greedy and menacing trusts to go on unrestricted regardless of the consequences to the people.

Nation in Revolt.

"All this was accomplished without arousing general suspicion. The Republican leaders and their henchman had the fullest confidence of the people of their party and it only dawned upon the mind and attention of the rank and file of the Republican voters during the last sessions of Congress that something must be radically wrong somewhere, for taxation became higher, and a promised revision of the tariff downward resulted in a revision upward. Along with this came a constant and intolerable advance in almost everything that is needed in the family and household, the struggling and impoverished laborer and poor man bearing more than his share of the burden. The outraged, disappointed and hitherto deceived people, who are the victims of party boosters, are today arrayed in a mighty army against the party and the senators and representatives who are the tools of combines and trusts and who occupy seats in the national Congress to do their bidding. So strong is this uprising against these unworthy men, or standpatters, that in order to save them the campaign howlers are again attempting to deceive and bluff the poor but honest laborers by promises and by citing disaster and poverty to them if any reduction in the tariff is attempted.

"In this congressional district the machine boosters are avoiding the real issues of tariff revision and Cannonism by attempting to pull the wool of post office bribery over the people's eyes, as if the paramount duty of your representative was to get public buildings or useless offices for political henchmen.

"The tariff is an important issue and I could submit many interesting figures and statistics, but for want of time must forego doing so in detail. You will remember the Dingley tariff bill was passed in 1897, and almost simultaneously with it the era of trusts swept down upon the unsuspecting people of our nation. Inside of five years trusts were organized having a total capitalization of $14,000,000,000. It is a feature of the trusts that they flourish only under the shadow of high protective tariff walls. They destroy domestic competition by consolidation and absorption. They control production, fix the selling price of manufactured products and control prices upon raw material coming within the scope of their power. The amazing greed of the favored combines and trusts is best reflected in the unreasonable and vicious Payne-Aldrich tariff bill passed by the last session of congress, which was concocted and framed by members of Congress, agents for the trusts, put there by the trusts, and who did the bidding of the trusts under the generalship of Speaker Cannon and Senator Aldrich.

Blame the Farmer

"You will remember that when Congress became alarmed at the rapid and unwarranted advance in the cost of living a congressional commission was appointed to investigate the cause. This commission after some investigation, and after spending a great deal of time and money, made quite an exhaustive report. In summing up the result of this investigation we find them placing the greater part of the responsibility for this high cost of living upon the farmer. Oh, the poor farmer. He is himself the victim of tariff extortion, and now the tariff boosters seek to load upon his shoulders the blame that properly rests upon the tariff itself. When you know that the chairman of that commission was a standpatter and a Cannon man, and that the majority of the commission were standpatters and Cannon men, you can understand better why such a false report was made.

"How about the loud cry of protection, the full dinner pail, happy homes and other arguments of the trust agents who insisted that protection meant high wages for the working man? Statistics show that wages advanced only about twenty-two per cent. during the past twelve years, while the cost of living advanced sixty per cent. With such a disparity of benefit for the working man, under Cannonism it would seem that the full dinner pail has been reduced to a sandwich and the happy home is still a thing of the future.

"There are many items in the Payne-Aldrich-Cannon tariff bill to which we might refer that are notoriously unjust and burdensome upon the poor man. You know what they are, and it is not necessary to take up your time by repeating them. Let us remember that this Payne-Aldrich-Cannon bill was signed by President Taft, who did so knowing and saying that it was not what it should be. He signed it in spite of the promises of himself and his party before his election that they would revise the tariff downward. This failure to do as they promised not only affected the Democrats and disappointed them, but it disappointed the progressive Republicans as well, and it affected the man of moderate means everywhere regardless of his party affiliations. Next we find this same Mr. Taft declaring it the best tariff law ever passed. Now, after realizing that a revolt on the part of the people has set in, Mr. Taft becomes alarmed and begs the people to trust him and his party once more, promising to be good and revise the tariff schedule by schedule. There must be something wrong, or why should he thus get down upon his knees before a deceived people?

Wasting Money.

"Let us consider briefly the policy of extravagance that has had free rein in Congress under Cannon control. The last session of Congress created 26,953 new offices or berths for political henchmen. The increased expenditure of the people's money for salaries and other expenses connected with these new offices amounts to $39,563,577.88. The total appropriation for the fifty-fourth Congress, the last under Grover Cleveland's Democratic administration, amounted to $954,496,055.

"The total appropriations for the sixtieth Congress, under the last Roosevelt Republican administration, amounted to $2,052,799,400. This shows an increase of over one hundred per cent under Cannonism and Aldrichism. The appropriations under Mr. Taft's last year total $1,098,847,184, or $3,567,685.65 for every working day in the year. All of this in the face of an increasing monthly deficit and in the face of a public admission that if the affairs of the government were conducted upon the same basis as a business man would conduct his individual enterprises, the princely sum of $300,000,000, could be saved annually. Why is this great waste of the public's money and who is responsible for it?

If you had a man in charge of your business who spent more money than you took in you would be compelled to put a better and safer manager in his place, or your failure in business would be inevitable. The same policy holds good for the government. If the credit of the government is to be maintained, the present standpat Cannon crowd must be put out and other men put in. The Democratic party has a record for economical administration of the affairs of the government of which it may well be proud. Retrenchment in governmental expenses must be enforced, and it is up to the voters to put Democrats in power in order to assure this retrenchment.

"It was a fortunate circumstance that enough of the honest Republicans now called insurgents, were willing to stand with the Democrats in Congress to assail the autocratic power assumed by Mr. Cannon. As far as it went it was a victory for representative government and the people's rights against Cannonism. Cannonism is the opposite of Democracy. It is antagonistic to that fundamental principle of government which is the shadow of high protective tariff

There is a Heap of Solace in Being Able to Depend Upon a Well-Earned Reputation.

For months Gettysburg readers have seen the constant expression of praise for Doan's Kidney Pills, and read about the good work they have done in this locality. Not another remedy ever produced such convincing proof of merit.

Mrs. Charles Kennel, 401 S. Washington St., Gettysburg, Pa., says: "I publicly recommended Doan's Kidney Pills two years ago and I have not changed my opinion of them. I still consider this remedy the best one on the market for kidney trouble. A member of my family suffered from rheumatism and kidney complaint and was subject to acute attacks of backache. There was a stiffness and lameness across the loins especially noticeable in the morning, and a tired, languid feeling was in evidence. Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at the People's Drug Store, brought the first relief that had ever been received and when they have been taken since then, benefit has always followed. It gives me great pleasure to tell of the merits of this remedy."

Silence!

The instinct of modesty natural to every woman is often a great hindrance to the cure of womanly diseases. Women shrink from the personal questions of the local physician which seem indelicate. The thought of examination is abhorrent to them, and so they endure in silence a condition of disease which surely progresses from bad to worse.

It has been Dr. Pierce's privilege to cure a great many women who have found a refuge for modesty in his offer of FREE consultation by letter. All correspondence is held as sacredly confidential. Address Dr. E. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription restores and regulates the womanly functions, abolishes pain and builds up and puts the finishing touch of health on every weak woman who gives it a fair trial.

Trifling Telephone Tangles

By Clara H. Holmes

Kittie Smith and John Colson were lovers, but perversity in matters matrimonial have become a proverb, and their case was no exception to the rule.

Kittie lived with a married sister, and as frequently happened, she assumed more authority than the most exacting parent would have done. She most decidedly refused consent to their marriage. "That child," she exclaimed indignantly, and promptly forbade John the house.

But, love finds a way, and their trysting place was in the thick shrubbery at the lower end of the garden. John was trying to persuade her to a clandestine marriage, but she lacked courage to assent. Her sister's shrill call from the back porch decided the question.

"Kittie, Kittle Smith! Come here this instant and put little Billy to bed."

"As if you were her servant!" whispered John indignantly. "That settles it, you are going to marry me tomorrow night."

"Oh, John, she'll never let me," breathlessly.

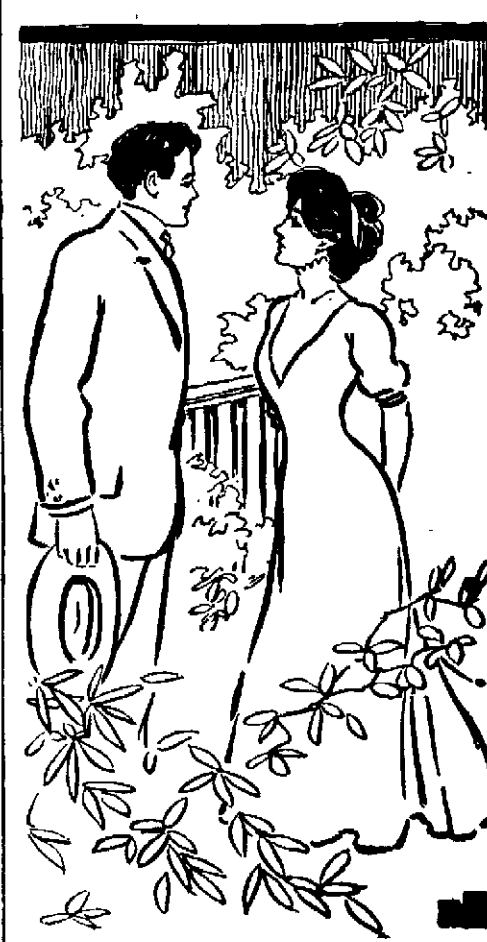

"She won't? Then we'll not ask her. You put those kids to bed as soon as the chickens go to roost, so you can get to the telephone office by ten o'clock. I'll put in the call with the operator and she'll give you the line so I can tell you where to meet me. Ten o'clock, sharp! I'll be waiting and so will the parson."

"Sister's coming," whispered Kittle, tremblingly.

"Let her come; she'll not find me," replied John airily, and leaping the fence, was gone.

Kittie met her sister with demure unconsciousness. "Were you calling?" she asked.

Kittie presented herself promptly on time at the telephone office and

"You Are Going to Marry Me Tomorrow Night."

giving her name, asked: "Is there a call for me?"

"Yes, Miss Olson," was the reply, at the same time indicating her box.

Kittie smiled consciously. "Colson! Well, now, or an hour from now will make no great difference," she thought.

"Hello, John," she called softly as soon as she had closed the door.

"Hello, Het," came the instant reply. "It's all right, come to the corner of Belmont and Main. I have an auto waiting, so hurry up."

"All right," she replied, and hung up the receiver. "Wasn't it funny that he called me Pet? I've heard him say a hundred times that he detested it—but I don't! I think it's just sweet. I suppose it's just the 'phone, but his voice didn't sound a bit natural," she murmured as she wrapped her veil about her head, completely concealing her features.

John, at the appointed place, lifted her to the seat without speaking. As he backed, preparatory to turning, another auto came swiftly down the street, and on the corner swerved toward them.

"Oh, no, you don't, Dave Olsen!" exclaimed John, speeding away.

"Hi, there! Stop, you idiot, or I'll have you arrested," yelled the driver of the other car.

"Come on, then," shouted John derisively. To Kittle he said: "Hold fast, I'm going to let her go."

But go as he would his pursuer kept pace with him, so he began twisting and turning, round one corner swaying ominously, skidding on another sharp turn until Kittle shrieked in affright.

Escape seemed impossible, so he doubled back through dark and narrow streets, the lamps on the pursuing machine gleaming like menacing eyes almost within touch. On a lighted corner a policeman ordered him to halt, and as he failed to obey, fired a shot at him. Kittle screamed and half rose, as if to leap from the car.

"Sit down!" called John angrily. At sound of a second shot she began to sob aloud.

"Oh, shucks," muttered John in vexation. A moment later he remarked, repentantly: "Why, Het, we don't get married every day in the year, but we are going to be married tonight if we have to smash the automobile record. I do believe that fellow's lost himself, or else the cop's got him!" He began to slow down.

Kittie inarticulately murmured something about smashing the automobile instead of the record, to which John paid no attention.

As he lifted her down at the parsonage he whispered to her: "I never thought you'd show the white feather." With a laugh, he half pushed her up the steps to where the parson was waiting for them.

Kittie, essaying to untie her veil with trembling fingers, glanced toward John, who stood, hat in hand, speaking to the clergyman. She made a rush and took refuge behind his reverence.

"I don't want to marry this man, I don't even know him, and—and—he's a maniac," she cried hysterically.

John turned to look at her. "Well, I would be crazy to marry you. Thunder, they'd have me up for baby stealing. Who are you, anyway?"

"I'm Kittle Smith," sobbingly, "but I don't know who you are."

"Well, I'm John Smith. My tribe is numerous, but it doesn't include grown-up babies," sarcastically.

The parson stood rubbing his hands together helplessly. "Well, I do declare! My dear, were you expecting to be married?" he asked of Kittle.

"Yes, sir, I was, to John Colson. I don't know this rough man at all," beginning to weep again.

John fidgeted restlessly. "Miss Smith, can't you shut down the flood gate long enough for explanations? As I understand it, you planned to elope with John Colson. And I, John Smith, had a similar arrangement with Hetty Olsen. Now, where were you to meet John Colson?"

"He left a call for me at the public telephone office, and when I talked with him—"

"But you didn't talk to him. That bungling operator gave you to me, and must have given him my party. Hetty Olsen. Fine mix-up! I thought that fellow following us was Het's wrathful sire, but it must have been your John. Now, we'll find them in one of three places, at the police station, for speeding; at the hospital, because he got in the way of the policeman's bullet; or back at the telephone office waiting for us."

At mention of the first two places Kittle gave another little shriek.

"Oh, stop pulling the whistle. I'll have Het give you a few lessons. You wouldn't catch her doing the weeping act or squealing over anything. She's clear grit, Het is," he concluded with evident pride.

The same officer who hailed John Smith either took better aim or had a lucky accident in the case of John Colson. When his second command to halt seemed likely to be disregarded, as was his first, his bullet just grazed John's elbow, numbing his arm so that his hand dropped from the steering wheel. Hetty pushed him aside, taking his place before the car had time to swerve.

"Is it broken?" she asked sympathetically.

"I don't know, but that doesn't matter; what does really matter is, they have got away from us," ruefully.

"They'll be hunting us when John finds out that he has the wrong girl," said Hetty laughing confidently.

As they came to a stop the policeman came up swinging his club impressively. "And what do you mean, racin' like that?" he demanded.

John laughed infectiously. "I'll tell you, I was trying to catch a thief. That fellow ahead was running off with my best girl. Wouldn't you chase him?"

"Faith I think I would, then! Well?" beginning to smile.

"It's this way. The old folks object, and—you know how 'tis. Through mistake he got my girl and I have his." The laughing tone, aided by a little persuader slipped into the brawny hand resting on the car, proved potent.

"Well, g'wan wid ye, but don't ye dare let me catch ye racin' again."

"I'll not let you catch me if I can help it," answered John facetiously.

"I think we better return to the telephone office," said Hetty, turning the car; but as they approached the building they saw that the office was closed for the night.

"What now?" asked John in a troubled tone.

"I'm sure I don't know," replied Hetty with a laugh. "It wouldn't matter so much to us, only I'm certain father would never let me mix his toddy again. It's once—perhaps, twice—Never! with him."

"And Kittle! Oh, she'll never let me mention elope again," said John.

"Hello, what's this?" as a car came rushing toward them.

"That you, John Colson?" came the greeting.

"It certainly is," replied he.

There ensued a rapid fire of questions and answers, an equally rapid exchange of partners, a little weeping on Kittle's part over her John's arm, a speedy ride to the waiting clergyman, and in a very short time two happy couples came out again into the night, each man wearing an air of proud proprietorship.

The parson remained standing in the open doorway enjoying the happy termination of the affair, also smiling a little at thought of the two generous gold pieces clasped in his hand.

"We've given you lots of annoyance, parson, take these as a recompense," the two Johns had said.

Simultaneously with the report that the Canadian mails were robbed came the story of a New York male robbed by his wife.

THE OCTOBER MAGAZINES

WITH A GREAT NEW POEM BY KIPLING.

Things of Vital Importance in the Care of the Orchard—Marriages of Another Age.

A Wonderful Poem by Kipling.

The October "American Magazine" contains the following wonderful new poem entitled "If—" by Rudyard Kipling.

"If you can keep your head when all about you Are losing theirs and blaming it on you:

If you can trust yourself when all men doubt you:

But make allowance for their doubting too;

If you can wait and not be tired by waiting,

Or being lied about don't deal in lies, Or being hated don't give away to hating.

And yet don't look too good nor talk too wise:

"If you can dream—and not make dreams your master:

If you can think—and not make thoughts your aim,

If you can meet with Triumph and Disaster And treat those two impostors just the same,

If you can bear to hear the truth you've spoken Twisted by knaves to make a trap for fools,

Or watch the things you gave your life to, broken, And stoop and build 'em up with worn-out tools;

"If you can make one heap of all your winnings And risk it on one turn of pitch-and-toss,

And lose, and start again at your beginnings And never breathe a word about your loss;

If you can force your heart and nerve and sinew To serve your turn long after they are gone,

And so hold on when there is nothing in you Except the Will which says to them: 'Hold on!'

"If you can talk with crowds and keep your virtue, Or walk with Kings—nor lose the common touch,

If neither foes nor loving friends can hurt you, If all men count with you, but none too much;

If you can fill the unforgiving minute With sixty seconds' worth of distance run, Yours is the Earth and everything that's in it,

And—which is more—you'll be a Man, my son!"

The Care of the Orchard.

"Three things are of vital importance in arranging your orchards," says E. P. Powell, in the October "Outing."

"Outing." "The first is good drainage. In most of our clay soils I would use up the stones by creating ditches every fifty feet."

"The second point to consider is that there is no better way of killing fruit trees than to put barnyard manure around the roots. You may top dress with some of this material, but beware about using it in the hole that you have dug."

"The third point in planting is to mulch your trees, every one of them, just as soon as planted. This mulch may be made of any porous stuff that you happen to have about, coal ashes or tan bark or weeds or autumn leaves—anything but material that mice will be likely to bed in. Coal ashes, on the whole, are the best material that we have handy."

A Matrimonial Pilgrimage.

The sister of Simon Newcomb, the great astronomer, tells in the October "McClure's" of their father's John Newcomb's wanderings in search of a wife, whom he had decided to select in accordance with scientific theories.

"John Newcomb stopped at a farmhouse for his refreshments, and in each house, if there was a daughter of marriageable age, he tarried perhaps a day, or even longer, to make a study of the maiden. He always made himself 'handy' about the place, drawing up water with the great well-sweep, bringing in fire-wood—doing anything that he could do and still keep near the daughter."

"Disappointment met him at every door. At one house the cooking was poor; at another the house was not neatly kept; at a third there was scolding or fault-finding, a want of harmony—and in all the maidens a lack of desire for learning or education. One young lady little knew by what a narrow margin she missed her fate. All was going smoothly till, when she was molding the dough for the baking pan, he noticed that a considerable portion of the dough was left in the wooden kneading trough. He asked her the reason for this, and her reply was that she left it for the horse, because he was fond of it. She always did this, she said; there was plenty. 'Want of thrift,' decided the young man, and he shouldered his bundle and walked on."

It had eleven graduates. One of them remained a bachelor. Don't be too severe on him. He died at twenty-four. Of the remaining ten, four were married twice and two were married three times. For ten husbands, therefore, there were eighteen wives.

Mr. G. Stanley Hall, President of Clark University, very competently remarks: "The problem of superfluous women did not exist in those days. They were all needed to bring up another woman's children."

The ten husbands of the Harvard class of 1871, with their eighteen wives, had seventy-one children. They did replenish the earth. They also filled the churchyards.

Twenty-one of those seventy-one children died in childhood.

This left fifty to grow up. It was an average of five surviving children for each of the ten fathers. But it was an average of only 2.7 for each of the eighteen mothers.—William Hard in the October "Everybody's."

Colonial Houses.

Aymar Embury in his article in October "House Beautiful" on "The Colonial House" draws attention to the present day tendency which seems to be set pretty strongly toward houses which embody the principles of colonial design.

The eyesores that passed for architecture during the period from 1830 to 1890 are many of them still present, and the artistic starvation of the people, not only of the United States but of the world during all that time was ineradicably deep. So strong, however, was the impulse of colonial days that when at last we began to recover from the obsession of Strawberry Hill Gothic and new Queen Anne cottages, our designs turned at once to the old American farms and again began to design in the rational, simple, picturesque and home-like colonial style. This article as well as the whole magazine is beautifully illustrated with homes and home things.

Regulating Corporations.

The good accomplished by the new York law for the regulation of the capitalization of corporations is thus illustrated by John S. Kennedy, in "The World To-Day" for October:

A traction company asked permission to issue $1,000,000 in bonds to construct its line. It was found that the company had outstanding an equal amount of stock, with no tangible property in existence; that there had been paid but $5000 in actual cash, and the balance was issued to the company's president as compensation for securing a franchise. Before granting permission for the bonds, the commission ordered $945,000 stock to be surrendered and cancelled, and the road was saved from that flood of water, and is now in complete operation.

Tuberculosis Germs.

"If a person who has tuberculosis drinks out of a cup and then another person should drink out of the same cup before the cup has been washed, the germ may be transmitted in this way," says James Jenkins, Jr., in "Woman's Home Companion" for October.

"Boiling water kills germs as effectively as any antiseptic, and dishes should never be considered absolutely clean that have not been washed in this way. Two persons should never use the same towel. The plan of individual washstands, which is so commonly used on the continent of Europe, should be more generally adopted in America."

"If you have a telephone in your house, the mouthpiece of the telephone should be cleaned every day, just as we clean the dishes we use on the table, and should be thoroughly disinfected at least twice a week."

The Kemedey for Diphtheria.

Thomas Lothrop Stedman in treating of the "Practical Victories of Medical Science" in the October "Good Housekeeping" says: Emil Von Behring, a German physician, is the man to whom so many thousands of mothers owe the recovery of their children from the once so dreaded diphtheria. The discovery of diphtheria antitoxin was announced in 1896 and was at first received with much skepticism, but a trial soon convinced all but the most conservative (or obstinate) physicians that this was really nature's remedy and therefore to be accepted. It cures in such an enormous proportion of cases, when given early enough, that it may truly be regarded as a specific remedy.

Paying for Moonshine.

At the bend of the road the young mountaineer turned down a ravine and in fifteen minutes we saw him coming back with something under his coat.

"What are you going to give him?" I asked.

"Seventy-five cents," said the agent decisively.

"Oh, give him a dollar anyhow. He walked two miles."

HITS SALARY RAISERS.
That Hon. James C. Cole ably and faithfully represented Adams county in the last Legislature is admitted by every one who followed his career in that body. He was true to every pledge given and to his party and county in being always against the corrupt machine masquerading as Republican. Of the many acts of Mr. Cole which pleased his constituents was the persistent negative with which Adams county headed the list, and with honor to his old county, in votes against every salary raising bill. There were nineteen of these bills in the last Legislature, in some instances the salary being doubled, as in the case of the salary of the Attorney General from $4000 to $8000, but no sooner had a salary grabbing bill shown its head than Hon. James C. Cole hurled at it a big "NO" and the people of his county should remember this faithful service against salary graft by supporting and working for the election of Mr. Cole.

BERRY'S DISHONOR.
There is no good reason for any Adams county Democrat to give his vote to Mr. Berry for Governor. Every Democrat owes it to his party to look up the record of Senator Grim and when he finds the character of Mr. Grim to be above reproach, of a sterling honesty leading every fight against the corrupt political machine of this state, he owes it to his party and himself to give Mr. Grim his vote. Mr. Berry's candidacy is shocking to every principle of honor. Mr. Berry entered the Democratic convention as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor and in honor bound to abide by the result of that convention. There is no conceivable standard of honor by which one can go into a convention asking party favors and failing to get what he is after then resort to other avenues to exploit oneself. Mr. Berry realized his position when after the convention he congratulated Mr. Grim and said he would be for him. This can be proven by the affidavits of a half dozen men who heard him whenever necessary to produce them. For Mr. Berry to go back on what every Democrat had a right to expect of him—support of the nominee Mr. Grim—he forfeits all support from Democrats and a Democrat to vote for Mr. Berry must swallow the dishonor of Mr. Berry's attitude.

CONGRESSIONAL ISSUES.
Congressman Lefean in a speech in Gettysburg last Saturday called attention to the things he had done for the 20th congressional district, but did not say that he owed his election four times to congress to Democratic voters of his district, for without these Democratic votes he would have had no congressional career.
He did not state that what he had done was the price the Republican congress was willing to pay for the Democratic votes that kept him in office. Jim Tawney in his whole congressional career only got two old canons for his district because his district was so heavily Republican that congress did not have to give it anything to keep it Republican. But the Democratic votes electing and re-electing Lefean made things possible for this district. A Democratic House would entirely change the point of view. If this district would insist upon keeping in office a Republican representative, A Democratic House would simply re-elect a Cannon Republican to a back seat and would rightly resent the fact of a strong Democratic district electing a Republican. A Democratic House would properly be unwilling to do things for a Democratic district untrue to the majority in the election of a Cannon Republican.
If any Democratic voters in this Democratic district believe that he has been on to his job in sending a Republican to a Republican Congress, then he can only keep on to his job by sending a Democrat to a Democratic Congress.

There is no doubt as to the political complexion of the next Congress. Up and down the land it is freely admitted that the next House will be Democratic. The future is read by the result in Maine with two new Democratic members of the House and a Democratic U. S. Senator. By the result in the Massachusetts district electing a Democrat. By the New York District electing Havens overwhelmingly over his standpatter opponent. By the lower Republican vote in the recent state elections in Vermont and New Hampshire. By the victory of the insurgents in Kansas, Iowa and California. By the defeat of Julius Caesar Burrows and the victory of Follette. Every portion of the country has spoken, in disapproval of the Regulars of the standpatters, of those responsible for the broken promise of a downward revision of the tariff, of Cannonism and for the nature of the Fair administration and all these things can have but one meaning, that the next Congress will be Democratic. There are those who predict a Democratic House by 50 majority and the possibility of a Democratic Senate is also admitted.
As sure as the sun rises and sets on next November 8th there will be a Democratic House. A big Democratic district will want recognition in that House and the only way it ought to be able to get it should be by a show of its democracy in electing a Democrat to represent the district.
The right man to support to represent the Democratic 20th Congressional district in a Democratic House is the Democrat Andrew R. Brodbek, who will be against Cannon and Cannonism, against monopolies and trusts, against high cost of living, against governmental extravagance, for tariff revision downward, and for the farmer and working man's interest.

Andrew Brodbek Popular Candidate.
One of the features of the York fair last week was the great crowds of representative citizens from all parts of York county, and many from Adams county, that almost constantly surrounded Democratic headquarters and the tent of Andrew R. Brodbek, the Democratic candidate for congress.
One of the Democratic workers who has served his party faithfully for many years, speaking of this remarkable outpouring, said, "I have been through a good many campaigns, but seldom, if ever, have I seen such a general interest manifested in a congressional candidate. They have been coming here by the thousands, in the last three days. I have seen men who hardly ever take an interest in politics, substantial farmers who feel as a rule that they are too busy to spend time talking with candidates, and sometimes even failing to vote through indifference, come to these headquarters and stand in line awaiting an opportunity to shake hands with Mr. Brodbek and assure him that they are taking their coats off and working for his election.

And then there have been crowds of city voters who have improved the opportunity offered by the fair to get a personal word with Mr. Brodbek. Both from city and county I have seen men in the crowd in and about the tent who have been so long absent from political activity that they are strangely unfamiliar, but they are fired with enthusiasm this time.
I tell you it has been a revelation to me. I can't see anything in sight but a regular tidal wave that will sweep Mr. Brodbek into congress by a plurality that will astonish his most sanguine supporters, and that will carry with it all the Democratic candidates by overwhelming pluralities. Take it from me, the people are aroused as they have not been in the twenty-five years of my experience in the county."

Temporary Heat Quickly

Did you ever stop to think of the many ways in which a perfect oil heater is of value? If you want to sleep with your window open in winter, you can get sufficient heat from an oil heater while you undress at night, and then turn it off. Apply a match in the morning, when you get out of bed, and you have heat while you dress. Those who have to eat an early breakfast before the stove is radiating heat can get immediate warmth from an oil heater, and then turn it off. The girl who practices on the piano in a cold room in the morning can have warmth from an oil heater while she plays, and then turn it off. The member of the family who has to walk the floor on a cold winter's night with a restless baby can get temporary heat with an oil heater, and then turn it off. The

is invaluable in its capacity of quickly giving heat. Apply a match and it is immediately at work. It will burn for nine hours without refilling. It is safe, smokeless and odorless. It has a damper top and a cool handle. An indicator always shows the amount of oil in the font. It has an automatic-locking flame spreader which prevents the wick from being turned high enough to smoke, and is easy to remove and drop back so that the wick can be cleaned in an instant. The burner body or gallery cannot become wedged, and can be quickly unscrewed for reworking. Finished in Japan or nickel, strong, durable, well-made, built for service, and yet light and ornamental.

"That's nothing to him." "He'll have to go for more," I urged.

"That's nothing—time and distance mean nothing to these fellows." The young fellow pulled a quart bottle from his coat that seemed to be filled with water, and the following formula was now gone through:

"If you were over in Kentucky now," said the agent, "and wanted a quart of liquor, how much would you give for it?" The moonshiner answered with perfect seriousness:

"This ain't a full quart, but if it was, I'd leave seventy-five cents." The agent drew three quarters from his pocket.

"Well, I am giving you anything. I'm just going to play crack-a-loo with that wagon crack," and forthwith he slowly and skillfully tossed the coins at the rut in the road, the mountaineer watching him without a smile. We left him there standing by the quarters, and once I started to look back.

"No use," said the agent, "he won't pick 'em up till we are out of sight. He can't swear we gave him the money, we can't swear that he took it—and there you are."—From "On the Trail of the Lonesome Pine," by John Fox, Jr., in the October Scribner.

Overlord of the Wires

How many people could tell off-hand what the second largest industrial organization in the world is? HUMAN LIFE for October carries the intimate life story of the man who guides the destinies of this gigantic enterprise—Theodore N. Vail, chief of the great American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

This man who rose from farmer lad to world financier, gravitated back to New England farmland again with his well-earned millions, only to be again called from his chosen life of leisure, after many years, to the head of the great organization his business genius had moulded, is certainly a unique figure among modern American captains of industry. It is a story that should fire the heart of every young man with ambition, and will make mighty interesting reading for older folk.

The White Coal of the Sierras

In the October SUNSET Magazine is told the wonderful new story of this age, the harnessing of waters by Clayton M. Jones under title "Greater than Gold." He says California is the second in water-power development in the United States and, with the completion of the river harnessing feats now going on, will be head and shoulders above any other state in the Union. The largest and latest harnessing of the rivers is occurring in this state, from which it is expected that in the near future she will double her present development of 466,744 horse power. Nowhere in the world are as great river-harnessing feats under way as where the Sierra slopes toward the Pacific coast line.

Kit Carson, Typical Pioneer

In selecting Kit Carson as the crowning figure for his memorial to the pioneers, which is to be unveiled in Denver, Col., Mr. MacMonies chose wisely. As historians and writers of western romance picture him, Kit Carson was solely an Indian fighter and scout. He was a sagacious civic chieftain as well as an intrepid leader in war, Indian, foreign and civil; a wise counselor of red men and white; a man who touched the West's wild life at more points than any other person of any day; a man who blazed trails on which great commonwealths were afterwards built, and who helped to build them.—From Charles M. Harvey's "Kit Carson, Last of the Trail Makers" in October Century.

Amazing Growth of Fairs.

To day there are in the United States thirty-eight State fairs and expositions and something like six hundred county fairs, and the number and the quality of these institutions have grown because they have performed important functions. Millions are deriving benefit directly by attendance on State fairs, and other millions are getting an indirect benefit.

The total attendance of only seven out of the thirty-eight State fairs of the country are in the Fall of 1909 was more than one million, and these seven were not selected just to make a showing.

The figures are: Iowa, 216,000; Wisconsin, 122,301; Minnesota, 329,000; Ohio, 122,414; Nebraska, 87,210; Spokane Interstate Fair, 106,286; Kentucky, 105,360—"The Delineator" for October.

Difficulty of Securing Help on Farms

In New England it is evident that in farming the East must begin all over again, and must set the new pace. The old-time methods will not longer; it is a question of proper equipment and fertilization, as in the South. The terrible drain of the large cities has made it extremely difficult to obtain help for the farm work. Many young men will take the hazard of sleeping in city parks or in basement lodgings rather than work on the farms, and it is for this reason that the great problem of to-day is to eliminate the drudgery of farm work and make it more inviting to the twentieth century lad. From what will the cities be recruited when the brawny boys from the farm are no longer available?—Joe Mitchell Chaplin, in "The Harvest of 1910," in the National Magazine for October.

Eggs by the Pound

By fixed tradition anything pertaining to the egg industry is a most amusing joke—the older the egg the more irresistible the joke. It is not surprising, therefore, that a New York official's proposal that eggs be sold by weight rather than number should be greeted with loud editorial laughter. Of course eggs vary in size, the editors admitted, but after all "eggs is eggs" and it is their nature to be sold by the dozen. The way mother bought eggs is good enough for us.

Hopeless, slavish conservatism this; egg progress is slow and tortuous. We denounce doctored scales and short weights, fake bottles, strawberry boxes and high bottoms; we have a wholesome contempt for the grocer who puts all the big peaches on top and mixes sand in the sugar. But we buy eggs by the dozen regardless of size until the very hens have seemed to see the futility of laying large eggs and the omelet languishes and fades away.—From October "Success Magazine."

Before I used Foley's Kidney Pills I had severe backaches and pains in my kidneys with suppressions and a cloudy voiding. On arising in the morning I would get dull headaches. Now I have taken three bottles of Foley's Kidney Pills and feel 100 per cent. better. I am never bothered with my kidneys or bladder and again feel like my own self." People's Drug Store.

principle which demands a government of the people, for the people and by the people. Its idea of government is that it should be one where the people are controlled by the grafters in the interests of the trusts. Cannon has been jolted, Cannonism has been branded and the complete overthrow of the trust-made dictator, his allies and his vicious system will be consummated by the voice of the people speaking through their ballots on the 8th of next November.

Voiced for Cannon

"The record of the votes of your present member of Congress shows him to be a friend of the combines and trusts and a servant of Cannon. His acts and votes show conclusively that the standpoint policies must have been his orders from the bosses and that he obeyed them. He voted for the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill, which helps the trusts and hurts you. He voted for Cannon, who helps the trusts and promotes Cannonism. By his vote he sustained Cannon in his nefarious schemes and autocratic domineering tendencies.

If it is the will of a majority of the voters of this Twentieth Congressional district that I should represent them in the Congress of the United States, I will solemnly pledge myself to be unswervingly true and loyal to the fundamental principles of Jeffersonian Democracy, which will insure a government of the people, for the people, and by the people; a government which will provide equal opportunities to all, equal and exact justice to all, special privileges to none; a government that will dethrone monopoly, that will take class legislation, special privileges, extortion and robbery out of the tariff system, and that will lower the walls behind which the trusts and combines have grown up; that will bring back just laws and constitutional taxation under a tariff sufficient for the needs of the government, economically administered, with due regard to ample protection for the laboring man and the wage earner against the importation of foreign cheap labor.

"I am in favor of liberal pension laws for deserving veterans who made sacrifices for the preservation of the union and now in their declining days should be liberally rewarded.

"I am unalterably opposed to the election of United States senators by the legislatures of the states under the present system. What we want is to elect our senatorial representatives in Congress by the direct vote of the people.

"A vote for me for Congress will be a vote against Cannon and Cannonism, against monopolies and trusts, against the high cost of living, against governmental extravagance, for tariff revision downward, for the farmer's and working man's interest.

"If the sentiment herein expressed coincides with your views, with the assurance that I will with fair and honest consideration defend and promote the best interests of the citizens of this district in all matters incumbent upon me to defend, I must respectfully ask you for your vote and active support at the coming election on November 8th."

Eddie Plank Tells of his Start.

"They all say I got my start the day of the battle of Gettysburg, but they exaggerate somewhat," said Eddie Plank. "I was born in Gettysburg in 1875, and that gave the boys a chance to say things. I admit the 1875 without trying to get away and sculp half a dozen years off my age as some of them do.

"At any rate, I think I am rather a freak as a baseball player because I seldom have heard of any ease anything like my own.

"As I told you, I was born in Gettysburg and I played some baseball around there in an amateur way, and without giving the game much thought. You see, I had other things to do, and down in Gettysburg we regard baseball as a Fourth of July and Saturday amusement rather than a business. Honestly, I never even read the scores or knew who played in the big leagues until I was 20 years old. Gettysburg looked big enough for me, and when I could play ball I played because I liked the running and the throwing and everything else. I didn't know a squeeze play from third base hardly. All I wanted to do was to beat the other fellows.

"I started to college about the time most of the other fellows are getting enough. I was 25 when I began pitching for the Gettysburg College team, and I was big and strong and fast and wild and inexperienced and everything else that goes to make up a college pitcher. I simply shut my eyes and cut loose and most of those who didn't strike out got bases on balls, and I have suspected since that a lot of them struck out just to escape from standing up there at the bat.

"Seriously, I think the real reason for my start was that I was older, stronger and better developed than the average college man. That made me stand out among them and it attracted the attention of professional clubs. I had not thought of baseball as a profession at all until offered a job, and I joined the Athletics in May, 1901, after school closed, knowing about as much about major league baseball as I know about who will make a three-base hit in the morning game next Decoration Day. I started right out to pitch the way I did at school, just wait till I saw the whites of their eyes and then shoot. I must say I got away with it luckily especially after wounding a flock of ball players. Suddenly I saw that there was more to it than throwing as hard as possible and curving them. I saw

I would have to do something and I began to study the game. Queerly enough, I went wrong right away. I was guessing wrong, but luckily for me I had enough speed and shouts to hang on by sheer power until I learned more. I worked and studied hard at the game, watched the other pitchers, picked up their tricks and began to pitch with much less exertion and strain and still get results. If I had gone on the way I started I would have been out of it in two seasons, and I'm still here. On the other hand, if I had known as much when I started about pitching, I'd be here a long time. This is a frank confession, but you say you want it for the benefit of young players, and no one needs to be told more than the new pitcher does, even if it is only to keep him from throwing his arm away."

LOCAL CASE IN POINT

Williamsport Sun Proves Accuracy of Senator Grim's Criticism.

Senator Grim, Democratic candidate for governor, in his speech at Meyersdale the other evening, pointed out an iniquitous feature of the present method of state road building that has a pertinent illustration of fact in the Milfin township road, in this county. Mr. Grim said:

"The method of allowing contractors extras for changed plans and specifications on roads should be abolished. Last year over a quarter of a million dollars, or one-twelfth of the whole amount appropriated, was paid to contractors for extras upon the decree of one man, and the counties and townships were obliged to bear their share of expense without any recourse."

The attempt made by the same highway department to ignore the contract specifications for the Milfin township road is still fresh in the public mind, as is also the fact that the change in construction upon that road has increased the price nearly $3000, this, too, in the face of the luxurious price that is being paid for the road way built even according to the original specifications. The high handed methods of the state highway department—against which is charged the game of politics—was shown in the fact that the people were not consulted in the change made in the road's construction and when public attention was drawn to the radical departure from specifications the reason was given that the department desired to "experiment" with new material.

The faults and failures of the state highway department have been of so long standing, and so egregious a nature, that the Republican administration has no ground for excuse for not having long since directed its course in both a more economical and a more effective channel, and the grilling given it by Senator Grim is none too vigorous nor are his criticisms undeserved. It is right that the political machine governing the affairs of Pennsylvania should be held responsible for the shortcomings of the highway department, and the Milfin township incident in our own community serves as an illuminating case in point as tending to show the things at which Senator Grim was striking.

Penrose Machine Tried a Bugaboo Which Failed.

Fearing that the popularity of Senator Webster Grim in his home district will result not only in giving the Democratic gubernatorial nominee a record-breaking vote, but also in sending a Democrat to the senate to succeed Mr. Grim, the Penrose machine leaders are using threats to intimidate the citizens of Bucks county. The voters have been notified that unless a Republican is chosen to succeed Grim in the senate, a reapportionment of senatorial lines will be made by the next legislature and the district made Republican. This they propose to do by joining Bucks with some Republican county adjoining.

The threat, which was carried to the people of Bucks county by Congressman Wanger in the interests of the Penrose machine, has already reacted against the Republican gang. Bucks county has been stirred from end to end by this cowardly attempt at intimidation and the voters have served notice on the corrupt Republican combination that every man proposes now to take his coat off for Senator Grim and the whole Democratic ticket. At the same time they defy Penrose to carry out his threat.

Bucks county was originally a Republican district, but the candidacy of Mr. Grim for the state senate eight years ago brought it into the Democratic column. Republicans and Democrats joined in his support and sent him to the senate for two terms. He served his constituents so well that Bucks county has been swinging to the Democratic column to the chagrin of Republican leaders. In the reapportionment of 1906 the Penrose gang endeavored to eliminate Bucks county as a senatorial district, but through the splendid fight put up by Senator Grim they were defeated.

GRIM WILL NOT WITHDRAW

Is Firm in Purpose of Fulfilling Party Obligations.

COURSE CORDIALLY APPROVED

Fairly Nominated, He Will Remain in the Field and Welcomes the Support of All Citizens.

Nine very estimable and influential gentlemen, citizens of Philadelphia have addressed an open letter to Webster Grim, the Democratic nominee for governor, and William H. Berry, the candidate of the Keystone Party for the same office, asking them to withdraw "in favor of a candidate whom both parties could concentrate upon." The writers of the letter are said to be independent Republicans who have thus far taken no part in the present campaign, but are unalterably opposed to the Penrose machine. They profess to believe that with the vote of the opposition to the machine divided between Grim and Berry the success of the machine candidate is assured.

The day the letter was made public Mr. Berry was in Harrisburg and privately stated to his friends that "under no circumstances would he withdraw." That evening, at a session of the executive committee of his party, held in the Bellevue-Stratford hotel, Philadelphia, a letter was read by the chairman of the committee, signed by Mr. Berry, in which he practically said that he is willing to withdraw if the executive committee of his party favored that course and Mr. Grim would follow his example. Of course his statement in Harrisburg expressed his real sentiments, and that contained in his letter to Chairman Hicks was for the consumption of the public.

Senator Grim, upon hearing of the letter, promptly and emphatically declared that he will not withdraw. "Nothing is further from my heart and purpose," he said. "I never entertained such an idea." Subsequently he received hundreds of telegrams and letters urging him to remain on the ticket. He was fairly nominated and is justly entitled to the support of his party. No well informed citizen can set up the excuse that he doesn't know the Democratic nominee. He has served eight years in the senate and been a leader in every movement for legislative reform. Any man who doesn't know Grim is unfamiliar with the public life of the commonwealth, for he has been an ornament in it.

Besides, Webster Grim is the nominee of the Democratic party and that party was not organized and isn't maintained to "beat" anybody. It represents principles and its purpose is to give force and effect to those principles. A political organization with no higher mission than to beat some individual or group of individuals would not be worth preserving and certainly wouldn't endure as the Democratic party has endured from the foundation of the government. The party has commissioned Mr. Grim to represent it in this crucial period in the political life of the state, and to fail of the fulfillment of that obligation would be recreancy, and Webster Grim is not a recreant.

William H. Berry, on the other hand, is the nominee of no party, though he is the candidate of a contingent of uncertain quantity. He was named by half a dozen persons, two of whom, John O. Sheatz and J. Heber Clarke, have already abandoned him. Raising Mr. Berry to the level of a real candidate, under such circumstances, would be a real distinction. But he has no intention of thus immolating himself. He is running for governor in obedience to his insatiable thirst for office, and he would accept the nomination of any party or combination of men. If the Keystone Party had not nominated him he probably wouldn't have supported the party. He cares less for principle than for patronage.

If the nine estimable gentlemen are really anxious to prevent a division of the reform vote at the coming election they can contribute to that result in a much more practical way than that suggested in their letter to Senator Grim and Mr. Berry. They can simply vote for Mr. Grim themselves and persuade all their friends, and others who think and feel as they do, to pursue the same course. They cannot doubt that the interests of the people would be as safe in the hands of Webster Grim as in those of any other man that might be named. His public record is an open book and a radiant page of achievement in the interest of good government. Why should such a man be humiliated or aspersed?

The division of the vote of citizens who are opposed to the Penrose machine is unfortunate beyond question. But there is no necessity for such division of forces. Every fair-minded man, irrespective of past political affiliation, can vote for Webster Grim without the least reservation or stultification. He represents no special interest and is the creature of no boss or group of bosses. He is an able, conscientious and courageous public servant and will be faithful to the people in whatever station he is placed. If any citizen desires to promote civic righteousness in the election of a governor of Pennsylvania this year, he may achieve that end by voting for Webster Grim.

What Cures Eczema?

We have had so many inquiries lately regarding Eczema and other skin diseases, that we are glad to make our answer public. After careful investigation we have found that a simple wash of Oil of Wintergreen, as compounded in D. D. D., can be relied upon. We would not make this statement to our patrons, friends and neighbors unless we were sure of it—and although there are many so-called Eczema remedies sold, we ourselves unhesitatingly recommend D. D. D. Prescription.

Because—We know that it gives instant relief to that torturing itch.

Because—D. D. D. starts the cure at the foundation of the trouble.

Because—It cleanses, soothes and heals the skin.

Because—It enables Nature to repair the ravages of disease.

Because—The records of ten years of complete cures of thousands of the most serious cases show that D. D. D. is today recognized as the absolutely reliable Eczema Cure.

A : Word : to : the : Wise

Wise men all agree that the test of a man's will-power is his ability to save money.

Money goes easily when you carry it about with you. But it is economy to put it into a safe and sound trust company, and pay all your bills and purchases by check.

It gives you the best memorandum of money paid out, and a good receipt at the same time.

The large capital, surplus and conservative management of the Citizens' Trust Co. is a guarantee that your deposit is always safe.

Safe Lock Boxes in our Steel Vault are offered FREE OF CHARGE to all depositors.
